200 Union Steamship Seamen Vote Favoring Strike Action

Stoppage Deadline Set For November 29

VANCOUVER (CP)—Strike action has been voted by 200 seamen employed by Union Steamships of British Columbia.

Announcement was made Tuesday that the workers voted overwhelmingly for strike action in a pay dispute. A strike deadline has been set for Nov. 29.

Norm Cunningham, port agent for the Seafarers' International Union, AFL, said strike votes by about 550 seamen who work for the Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Steamships will also be taken "in due course."

A strike would cripple virtually all coastal steamship service.

Earlier, the union rejected a federal conciliation board recommendation that no wage increases be paid the workers.

The union sought a 12½ per cent wage boost and an increase in the overtime rate to $1.50 an hour. The board recommended that overtime pay be increased to $1.32 an hour from $1.17.

The average wage for seamen now is $210 a month plus board and bunks.

QCA Denied Licence To Kitimat

CPA Service Inland Granted

VANCOUVER (CP)—The Air Transport board has denied an application by Queen Charlotte airlines Ltd., to operate between Vancouver, Kitimat and Terrace under a Class A licence.

This decision and a series of others arising out of board hearings held in B.C. last July were made public here Tuesday night by QCA.

The board did, however, grant QCA, under a Class 1 licence, the right to serve Port Hardy, as well as Nanaimo, Comox, Campbell River, Powell River, Westview, Alert Bay, Minstrel Island and Sullivan Bay.

An application by QCA to serve Port Alice under a Class 3 irregular licence was also approved.

Pacific Western Airlines Ltd., were granted a Class 2 licence to operate between Port Alberni and Vancouver.

Canadian Pacific Airlines have been given the go ahead to operate under a first Class licence while serving from a base to Prince Rupert, and going into Terrace, Smithers and Prince George. Their present licence permits Class 1 service to Port Hardy, Sandspit, Prince Rupert and Whitehorse from Vancouver.

The city has been divided into four sections, with section captains, sub-captains and canvassers assigned to each and with the overall drive under the chairmanship of Helen Trapp. So well organized is the pupils effort that each canvasser knows the individual houses he or she will visit.

Persons who are already members, can help speed up the drive by keeping their membership cards or receipts ready to show the canvasser.

Canada's Taxes "Pretty High" Asserts Harris

MONTREAL (CP)—Finance Minister Harris said Tuesday night he has made an initial examination of Canada's tax rates and has found them "pretty high." He described the personal income tax as "severe."

Mr. Harris, who took over the finance portfolio last July, said he is also concerned over the corporation tax rate under which the federal government "takes away half or more of the rewards of hard work which leads to promotion."

"We will get together later to see what we can do about lower tax rates," he told the Canadian Tax Foundation.

While agreeing that rates are high and exemptions low, Mr. Harris added that tax rates must be high if the government is to find revenue to pay bills.

But, he continued, "there is so much to be gained if we can preserve initiative and enterprise."

Vancouver "Colombo Plan" Urged to Aid Unemployed

VANCOUVER (CP)—A plea for a "Colombo plan" to help Vancouver feed its thousands of unemployed will be placed before the federal government Nov. 25-26.

Alderman Jack Cornett will carry the city's requests to Ottawa as provincial, labor, management and charitable agencies combine to tackle the problem.

The suggestion of a "Colombo plan" for jobless came from Ald. Anna Sprott, who said:

"I'm in favor of foreign aid but the time has come when we must feed hungry people within our gates." She suggested Canada's food surpluses, now going in part to feed hungry millions in Asia, should be diverted to some degree to Vancouver.

Horace Keetch, national employment service office manager, said there were nearly 18,000 persons on unemployment rolls in the city at the end of October. Available jobs listed during the month totalled 5,400.

"We had 20,000 unemployed last winter and this year we have a carry-over of about 4,000 more than normal," he said.
