U.K. yachtsmen hatch new plan for America Cup

LONDON (AP)—British yachtsmen may adopt an attitude of "if you can't lick 'em, join 'em," in new plans aimed at winning the America's Cup from the United States.

Four of the wealthier diehards are considering building four 2-metre yachts. The four would compete against each other for the right to challenge the U.S. in 1961.

If the plan sounds familiar, it is. It's the same planning and training procedure the U.S. used in its defence of the cup last year.

No decision has been reached here on whether another challenge will be made in 1961 for the cup, but Hugh Goodson, chairman of the syndicate that built Sceptre, said Tuesday members of the four potential British syndicates will meet here late this month to talk it over. If the answer is yes, plans will probably go into motion for the four yachts—each costing about $100,000.
