BLACKWOOD on BRIDGE

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

In recent columns we have been discussing the handling of situations where the dummy was short of entries. In today's deal Mr. Champion came to grief because the dummy hand had too many entries.

Mrs. Keen's bidding looks a little strange, but she decided it was extremely unlikely that her long, weak club suit would be of the slightest interest to her partner. Spades suited her and she planned, eventually, to show her spade support.

First, though, she showed where her top strength in the side suits was located. Actually, her methods made it much easier for Mr. Champion to put the hand in a slam at spades.

The king of clubs was led and Mr. Champion ruffed. He cashed the ace of spades and immediately saw his problem when Mr. Meek discarded the deuce of diamonds. If he picked up all four of the outstanding trumps and then cashed dummy's high cards in the red suits, it would take his last trump to get back to his hand.

Mr. Champion

The queen of hearts would still be at large and when the enemy got in with that card, they would be able to cash their top clubs.

Mr. Champion decided there were entirely too many entries on the board. He determined to get rid of them just as if they were deuces. He discarded not one, but all three of dummy's high cards in hearts and diamonds.

Beginning at trick two he cashed four rounds of spades and on the fourth lead discarded the ace of diamonds from dummy. Next he cashed the king and queen of diamonds and got rid of dummy's ace and king of hearts.

He was then in the favorable position of being able to drive out the queen of hearts while retaining full control of the trump situation.

"This proves," commented Mr. Champion, modestly, "that when you can play the cards like I can, you don't need aces and kings."

Sportsman loses trophy

LARCHMONT, N.Y. (CP)—An act of sportsmanship Friday cost Warner M. Willcox the American Perpetual sailing trophy.

Willcox, member of the Orienta Yacht Club of Marmaroneck, N.Y., representing the United States, won two of the three individual match races with Warren Brown of the Royal Bermuda Yacht Club. They split two races Friday after the American finished first in Thursday's race.

But at the award dinner Friday, Willcox asked that Brown be awarded the trophy since he said he was out-sailed Friday and won only because the Bermuda skipper was unable to read one course marked and became confused.

"Canada will not only maintain its contributions to aid programs at their present high level but will make increases. We trust that other member states will find it possible to do likewise, whether within the United Nations framework or through other channels."

He described the problem of feeding the millions of chronically hungry and undernourished peoples of the world as tragic and urgent, and said Canada is acutely aware of the needs of the hungry.

"The Canadian government . . . welcomes and commends the suggestion made by President Eisenhower last week that this assembly should seriously consider devising some workable scheme along the lines of the food and peace program—Canada envisages a world food bank to provide food to member states through the United Nations."

In conclusion, he said: "Let us not leave this place without some hope for mankind. Let us instead say to the peoples that death's pale flag shall not again be raised in war, and that fear shall be lifted from the hearts and souls of men.

"For this could be our last chance to say it."
