BLACKWOOD on BRIDGE

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

There is a point of play in this hand which comes up fairly frequently and which you would do well to add to your bag of trick.

It occurs in the situation where you, as a defender, have a pretty good trump holding, including one sure trump winner. You have a side suit with which you can force declarer. The point is to take your trump trick at a time when dummy is out of trumps because if your good side suit can be ruffed on the board, obviously that does not reduce declarer's own trump holding and thus gains no advantage.

See how Mr. Muzzy threw away a golden opportunity in this deal. He opened the king of hearts and Mr. Dale won with the ace. The king of trumps was led and Mr. Muzzy stepped right in with the ace. He cashed the queen of hearts and looked around for new worlds to conquer.

Mr. Champion

Finally he switched to the eight of diamonds. Mr. Champion won with the ace and returned the suit. Mr. Dale then claimed the balance of the tricks and his contract.

"What's your hurry about taking the ace of trumps, Muzzy?" roared Mr. Champion. "Just take the third round of trumps and lead the queen and another heart. Dale would have to ruff in his own hand. Then when I got in with the ace of diamonds I'd lead another heart. When he ruffed that, he'd be out of trumps and you'd have one left—for the setting trick."

"Wait a minute," said Mr. Muzzy desperately. "If Dale won the first two trump tricks he wouldn't lead a third round. He'd switch to diamonds right there."

Mr. Champion gave him a withering look. "All right, so he switches to diamonds. You start an echo by playing the eight of diamonds. I lay off the first lead of the suit, win the second and lead a third round which you ruff with a small spade. Your ace of trumps is then the setting trick."

Mr. Muzzy could think of no good answer so he fell back on an old favorite of his. "You may be right," he said, "but the play you're suggesting is double-dummy."

Mr. Champion grinned wickedly. "You certainly are," he said.

Badminton tourney continuing

The Civic Centre Badminton club reached the semi-finals in mixed doubles play last night and men's doubles and women's mixed doubles games are scheduled for tonight.

All finals will be played Sunday afternoon with the public invited to attend.

Last night a total of 23 doubles teams had played off, each in best two out of three series.

In "A" Flight Fran Cross and George Viereck defeated Lea McKay and Nick Pavlikis 15-11 and 15-4 and Joan Booth and Gordon Elder won over Marg Tough and Bob Tough 15-1 and 18-17.

Miller Bay players dominated "B" Flight with H. Lincoln and Larry Denny edging Rita King and Art Garrett 15-12 and 15-12.

A second Miller Bay couple Laura Graham and Harry Wiek defeated Angela Newbury and Ed Dyer 15-5 and 15-8.
