Toronto couple take pairs skating title

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP)— Canada's near-perfect twosome, Barbara Wagner and Robert Paul, glided away with their third straight pairs championship in world figure skating Wednesday night but both were dissatisfied.

"We've skated much better many other times," said Paul, a dashing 21-year-old perfectionist. His 20-year-old partner, who has skated with him 5½ years, nodded agreement. Both are from Toronto.

Their smooth, effortless execution of intricate jumps and spins overshadowed a spectacular, though occasionally choppy, performance by the runner-up West German pair of Marika Kilius and Hans-Jorgen Baumler.

The Canadians were rated first by six of the seven judges for a wide margin of victory, although their point spread of 101.8 to 98.3 for the West Germans was narrow. Points are awarded on the basis of content of program and manner of performance.

Awarding of the pairs championship cleared the way for pert Carol Heiss, 19-year-old New York University coed, to bid for her fourth straight senior women's crown tonight.

Already far ahead in the compulsory figures phase of competition, Carol will seek to complete her conquest of the world's best in free skating.

All seven judges picked Carol first in the figures which count 60 per cent in the final rating. Hanna Wapte of Austaria was second and Sjoukje Dijkstra of the Netherlands was third.

BLACKWOOD on BRIDGE

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

Make a careful note of the principle involved in the play of this hand. Its use, whenever available, will improve your game materially.

Mr. Champion led the king of clubs and when he saw the dummy, shifted to a trump. Now Mr. Masters saw that he had to lose two clubs and a diamond in top cards. If he could successfully finesse the queen of hearts he would have ten tricks. One way to play the hand, then, was to take three rounds of trumps ending on the board and then to lead a heart and put in the queen if Mrs. Keen played low.

But Mr. Masters figured it like this. The heart finesse was only a 50-50 proposition. As long as this chance was not jeopardized, any other line of play (however remote its chance for success) would increase the odds in his favor.

Mr. Masters

He won the second trick on the board with the queen of spades and led the trey of diamonds. Mrs. Keen could not gain by going in with the ace. If she did so, Mr. Masters could win a trick with the queen of diamonds later, enter dummy with the jack of spades and discard the queen of hearts on the king of diamonds.

So Mrs. Keen played low and Mr. Masters won with the queen of diamonds. He returned a diamond and when the 10 came up on his left he let it win, playing low from dummy.

Mr. Champion led another trump which was taken in dummy with the jack. Mr. Masters was pleased to see that the opening trumps broke evenly. His next lead was the nine of diamonds and Mrs. Keen had to play the ace. Mr. Masters ruffed and led the ten of clubs. Mr. Champion took this with the ace and got out with a club.

Although the queen of clubs in the closed hand was now good, Mr. Masters ruffed it in dummy with the deuce of spades so that he could lead the king of diamonds and discard the queen of hearts. Thus he made his contract without risking the heart finesse. And as you see the finesse would have failed.

Defensive Driving Is The Safest

By Martha Johnson
Dodge Safety Consultant

MANY GRAVE MARKERS could be inscribed: "I had the right-of-way!" Most drivers should realize by now that having the "right-of-way" is one thing, but that insisting on taking it is a horse of a different color. It's no guarantee for survival.

So you can't count too heavily on your so-called legal rights when driving. You've got to anticipate and give way to the reckless and careless motorist.

You can only hope that the law or his conscience catches up with him before he becomes a "vital statistic."

Meanwhile, always expect the other driver to do the wrong thing, and be prepared to evade him.

HERE ARE SOME things you can expect of this type of driver:

He's inclined to trespass on your side of the road.

He tries to beat traffic lights.

He may halt at a stop-street, then gun his car into the path of oncoming traffic.

He cuts in and out of traffic and actually dares you to scrape his fender.

He cuts in front of you to make a turn instead of getting into the proper lane ahead of time.

Expert steering and braking can save you from this type of driver most of the time. But equally important: Use your head and not your horn.

Remember, defensive driving is the safest way to drive.

Curling Draws

Playoffs in the Canadian Legion, Jeannie Warren curling event will commence Sunday at 11 a.m., a league spokesman reported today.

Miner and Bruce Simundson will be paired off and Jim Riddell and Jean Gordon will be fighting it out to meet Darrow Gomez and Box Moxley respectively in the next round at 9 p.m.

Teams not involved in the playoffs are asked to turn out for challenge games at 9 p.m.

Chinchillas arrive

LONDON (Reuters) — Sixty young Canadian chinchillas arrived Tuesday night by air from Montreal on the order of racing driver Stirling Moss and his father. Most of them will be sold at Britain's first chinchilla auction. Moss and his Canadian-born wife helped load the chinchillas and drive them to the Moss family farm in Hertfordshire.
