administrator at an abnormally high salary."

Ald. Hills said the mayor had no control over the tax rate and his advertisements meant nothing. He ridiculed the mayor's "picture campaign" and said that "come what may the picture of the ditch on Sixth Avenue East had to be done first" before other vital things were done for the electorate.

Arthur Murray told the "amazing turnout" of voters that claims that he was a clown "do not lend dignity to the campaign."

He stressed that he did not enter the campaign because of a flooded basement and that if he is elected he would have to "leave that sewer for 10 years."

He said that he wasn't going to criticize the administrative staff at City Hall but he felt that "they were not getting leadership."

He said as a longtime member of the Parks Board he couldn't find any chain of command at City Hall and he felt that deceptive practices were being used on finances. He said the provisional budget released by City Council did not give a true picture and that public documents "should not be used as election bait."

He wanted to know how much had been spent by hte city on the swimming pool and he was tired of paying $6,000 for garbage for the Algoma landfill.

He said the parks board budget was $31,001 but there was always "this $6,000 for garbage."

Mr. Murray said the average citizen can't get through the red-tape at City Hall to do business with the city.

Mayor P. J. Lester said that he had heard nothing concrete offered prior to his turn to speak. He then referred to his opening speech at the first Council meeting of the year and said that the following items had been accomplished (1) The tenders had been called for the firehall and the firehall was now built; the new sewer program, not only improved the sanitary sewers but included storm sewers to handle the water. (3) that the City Council, not being made up of experts, believed in using its consultants; that the winter works program had given 20 unemployed men work last year and would probably aid 30 men this year; that the street lighting program was almost ready and when it was presented would give the city the best lighting possible; that the city was pressing to expedite the marine highway system to Alaska and that a barge system to Juneau would be in augurated next spring; a commitee had been formed to survey the city's potential and that despite all criticism the tax to include machinery in assessments netted the city $38,000 a year. If that wasn't paid by industry it would mean another 217 mills on the general mill rate, he said.

it's a FACT

The Mississippi River's meanderings add at least 500 miles to its length between Cairo, Illinois, and the Gulf of Mexico. Its length is 2,470 miles because of its meanderings. It carries with it over 400,000,000 tons of dirt each year to be added to the delta at its mouth.

BLACKWOOD on BRIDGE

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

The tactics used by Mr. Rank had been getting worse and worse during this rubber. Today's hand was the payoff. Mr. Masters, genial host of the bridge club, decided to do something about it.

It was Mr. Abel's opening lead and he chose the ace of diamonds, which won. He switched to a low spade at trick two and Mr. Meek won with the jack.

Mr. Meek then started worrying. Obviously there was nothing to the hand except the problem of locating the queen of trumps. A heart finesse could be taken either way. While Mr. Meek was sweating over this decision, Mr. Rank spoke up.

Mr. Meek

"If you've got 'em, lay 'em down, Meek, and let's get to the next hand," he said.

That did it. If Mr. Rank could not see Mr. Meek's problem — then clearly he could not have the queen of hearts. Mr. Meek cashed the ace of hearts, led the jack and finessed it, losing to the queen for a one-trick set.

At this point another stranger walked up to the table. "Well, my old friend, Shady," exclaimed Mr. Rank. "Here, Shady, I want you to meet some 'cousins' of mine"—and introductions were made all around.

"Shady and I have been partners for years," continued Mr. Rank. "Would anyone like to play us a set game?"

Mr. Masters looked grim. "I'd be glad to," he said.

Mr. Rank looked a little uncertain. "Well, how about these other fine players, Muzzy and Abel," he asked. "I hate to break up their game."

"Oh, we can get another player to fill up this table," said Mr. Masters. "You and Mr. Shady have such a fine partnership, you surely don't want to play any pair which has had less experience together."

"Uh, no, of course not," stammered Mr. Rank.

Mr. Masters pulled Mr. Dale aside. "What this fellow Rank has been doing is the same as cheating," he whispered. "Want to help me teach them a lesson?"

"Wouldn't miss it for the world," Mr. Dale replied.

ESKI

By WILLIAM RITT

THE TIME has come for Eski and Doc Dickery to start their trip into the Great Unknown. "Take care of yourself, dear little Eski," Santa says. "Please come back to us safely by Christmas Eve, little one!"

FROM the safety of the Timetron's control chamber, Santa, Mister Weatherbee and Professor Dee watch as Doc Dickery, then Eski climb into the Atomic Sleigh. Eski waves one more goodbye before closing the hatch.

"GOODBYE, my friends — and good luck!" murmurs Professor Dee as he stands at the Timetron's controls. Then he throws a double switch which is to send Eski and Doc Dickery to — who knows where?

THERE is a bright flash — a thunderous roar. Then darkness and silence. Santa and Mister Weatherbee open their eyes. Eski, Doc Dickery and the Atomic Sleigh have completely disappeared! (To Be Continued)
