MOTOR MAIDS

Car Replaces Magic Carpet

By Jeanne Smith, Dodge Safety Consultant

THAT FAMOUS PRINCE in "The Arabian Nights," who whisked about the country on his magic carpet, had nothing on today's mechanized nomads.

In fact, compared to the modern motorist, the prince was more of a stay-at-home than an explorer.

Today's automobile — safe, dependable and comfortable — has made almost everyone a traveler. A coast-to-coast jaunt is now almost as commonplace as a trip to the supermarket.

Miss Smith

This year, for instance, over 75 million vacationers, in an estimated 28 million cars, will travel the nation's highways. More than a quarter of these cars will cover from 2,500 to 5,000 miles—and a good share of the time they'll be piloted by feminine drivers.

A few words of caution, however, to women who plan to share vacation driving duties this summer or to handle the job alone.

Physical and mental fatigue are great hazards to a safe motoring trip. To avoid fatigue when traveling, follow these suggestions from the American Automobile Association:

Rise early and accomplish as much driving as possible before the highway becomes crowded. If you become tired, either stop and rest or let a driving companion take over.

Remember that daylight vacation driving is not only more enjoyable but safer. At dusk, find a motel or hotel for the night. Try to get eight hours' sleep if you plan to drive the next day.

Beware of highway hypnosis, particularly when driving alone. This malady often occurs when driving on long, straight and uneventful roads—and can cause a serious accident. Break up your trip with frequent stops.

Dress comfortably so that you won't become restless behind the wheel. Don't over-indulge in food or drink. It results in fatigue and lessens your control of the car.

To avoid tiring your eyes, wear sunglasses whenever there is a glare from the sun or highway.

If you follow these basic tips, you'll safely reach your destination, relaxed and ready for fun.
