IN DIOR COLLECTION—Hobble hemline shown by Yves Saint Laurent during the fall Paris openings is seen in the short white evening dress of jewelled nylon tulle, by model at left. The balloon skirt, blousing over a tight band which barely covers the knees, gives a narrow hem line. The bodice is topped by a deep band of the same silvery embroidery used at the hem. Lavishly applied rhinestones gives a shimmering, vertical-stripe effect to the diasphanous fabric. At right the model wears a statuesque evening gown by Jules Crahey of Nina Ricci, shown for fall Paris openings. In copper green polished satin of acrylic fibre and silk, the sophisticated draping features a cascading fringed side panel and a sunburst of unpressed pleats which minimize the waist. The instep length and the matching giant stole are typical of the Paris house. —CP photos.

— MUSEUM BRIEFS —

It is always nice to come home, although my trip via car to Vancouver and home via plane was very pleasant, and especially the B.C. Tourist Council convention held in Penticton, where I enjoyed the discussions and felt we all received a "Shot in the arm."

All that remains is to try and keep that feeling of enthusiasm and to convince others that we must do something in Canada to make the tourists want to visit us, have something of special interest in each community and have the "Welcome" mat out at all times.

Tourist business is big business for this province, bigger than most of us realize and it is impossible for our Government to do it all. Every city should do their part, every man, woman and child should also be alerted to this industry, which is the case in Hawaii—tourists are kings there.

It is also interesting to note that museums, art galleries and other places of interest and culture play a big part in attracting this tourist trade, and we are fortunate that we do have a museum to be proud of, also art displays, besides our scenery and other attractions.

While I was away Mrs. Les Brian took charge of our museum, and I wish to thank her for her good job, everything was in order. The Museum was kept so nice and clean and I appreciate her taking over. Mrs. Brian told me she had quite a number of guests each day, including H. A. Yocum of the Kansas City Museum, who thought our displays and building were just wonderful. I am sorry that I missed this interesting guest.

W. R. Milliken, assistant passenger agent of the CNR in Vancouver also was a guest, this gentleman I met in Penticton and enjoyed a chat with him, including many other people from the transportation companies and the government.

Hon. Earle C. Westwood was a very good speaker, very cooperative and I believe we have a good man at the head of Conservation and Recreation, with the able assistance of Dr. D. B. Turner as deputy. I believe these men are sincere and will do all in their power to assist tourism. I also met the Deputy Minister of Highways, H. T. Miard who asked me about our highway, and at the meeting I mentioned the lack of highway signs in our area, and was assured that this would be rectified.

I sincerely hope so, but they won't forget, because I intend to remind them.

In future letters I will tell of some of our visits, places we saw and enjoyed, also people I met who were of interest, including John Fisher of "John Fisher Reports" and I feel it is a shame that he is no longer on the national network of radio, although he does radio work in Eastern Canada, and is most dynamic. It does one a lot of good to meet people who are full of enthusiasm in their work, and his is "selling Canada."

Remember Christmas is just around the corner and we have "Skeena, River of Destiny" by Dr. R. G. Large for sale, also "Soogwilis" by the same author in two bindings. These two books make an attractive gift.

Indoor field day fun-event
