BLACKWOOD on BRIDGE

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

At the beginning of the current series of columns I made the point that today a player has little difficulty in selecting his correct first bid. It is his second bid which is more likely to pose a problem.

Should he make a jump rebid or give his partner a jump raise; or should he be content with a simple rebid or a single raise?

I have been driving home the advice that the opener needs seven playing tricks for a jump rebid in his own suit or a jump raise of his partner's bid.

Now what about a jump rebid by the responding hand? For the responder, a jump rebid in a suit requires five playing tricks. This applies whether he is rebidding a suit his partner has not supported, rebidding a suit his partner has raised or raising a suit bid by his partner.

Mr. Masters

Of course when he is rebidding a suit which his partner has not supported, that suit should be a good six-carder but this does not increase the requirement of five playing tricks in the hand as a whole.

Taking the most pessimistic view of his spade suit in today's deal, Mr. Masters figured it was still worth four tricks.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♦	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♦	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	All Pass

Opening lead: King of clubs.

The ace of hearts made a total of five, enough for a jump rebid. Mrs. Keen now considered her doubleton ace as sufficient trump support and went on to four spades.

The defenders won the first two tricks in clubs, led a third club and Mr. Masters ruffed. He cashed the king and ace of hearts and led a third heart to ruff in dummy. Here he made a nice play. He had noticed the play of the queen of hearts on his right. If he ruffed with dummy's eight of spades and Mr. Abel overruffed and returned a trump, what would he do with his fourth heart?

He would very probably lose it and that would be the setting trick. So he ruffed with the ace of spades. Mr. Abel discarding the trey of diamonds.

Now he cashed the ace of diamonds, ruffed a diamond in his hand, led his last heart and ruffed with dummy's eight of spades. Mr. Abel overruffed but it took the jack of trumps to do it. The remaining trumps in Mr. Master's hand were all high.

Seattle, Calgary make finals in WHL playoffs

By The Canadian Press

Seattle Totems will meet Calgary Stampeders in Alberta Tuesday night in the first game of a best-of-seven series for the Western Hockey League's President's Cup.

Seattle made the grade Sunday night at home before 4,021 fans by defeating last year's league champion Vancouver Canucks 3-0 and taking the coast division best-of-seven series 4-1 in games.

Calgary won the prairie division title by downing Winnipeg Warriors in four games straight.

The second game in the final will be played Thursday in Calgary. If the games are split, the third will be played in Calgary, according to present plans. But if either team has a 2-0 lead, the third game will be held in Seattle.

Canuck's Mel Pearson returned to the ice in the final coast game only to be benched in the second period by a charley horse, his second since being laid up with one in the second game of the series.

Totems crowned their goalie, Bev Bentley, hero of the night as he stopped 19 hard shots from the opposition, while Canucks lauded the performance of their netminder, Brue Gamble, as he handled 13 equally hard shots from Seattle sticks.

MOVIE COLUMN

Oscar awards TV show probably never perfect

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)— Oscar aftermath — there probably will never be the perfect Academy Awards telecast, awards affairs being what they are. The producers strove mightily this year and produced a better-than-average score of hits but the unusual quota of misses.

The biggest miss was the mistiming that produced an extra 20 minutes of unplanned show time.

The audience was aghast as Jerry Lewis floundered to fill in the time. At one point he spotted ex-partner Dean Martin amid the 100 stars on stage for the finale.

Commented Lewis: "And they said we'd never appear on the same stage together again!"

Most of the audience missed Martin's apt reply: "He needs me."

IDYLL OVER?

Elizabeth Taylor and Eddie Fisher seemed to get a very tepid reception for their parts in the program. Perhaps the movie crowd, like some others, is tiring of the Liz-Eddie idyll . . .

On the other hand, there was an unusually warm reception to the brief appearance of Inger Stevens. It seemed like an outstretched hand of sympathy for a girl who has undergone emotional stress . . .

My fashion expert tells me that the trend was toward the slinky, tight, full-length formal rather than the short kind. Tops among the stunners: Cyd Charisse in a gold lame; Janet Leigh in a form-fitting black lace; Rhonda Fleming a red-haired dream in a powder blue gown.

A KNOCKOUT

Rosalind Russell was a knockout in a Mame-ish outfit and delivered her tribute to Maurice Chevalier in great style. Also noted: The shapely gams of Ingrid Bergman and Irene Dunne.

About my predictions. I scored right on 10 awards and rightly celled the sweep for Gigi. I goofed on two. I guessed wrongly that the Academy would again choose a newcomer, Shirley Maclaine. This was the year for the old reliables.

And I picked Lee J. Cobb instead of Burl Ives. I still think Ives got it for Big Daddy, for which he wasn't nominated.

Floor hockey playoff game postponed

The second game of the Senior Men's Floor Hockey League finals between Digby and Hill and Sons, scheduled for Thursday has been postponed to April 21 due to the arts and crafts display in the Civic Centre gymnasium.

involving the setting up of over a thousand observational stations from the Arctic to the Antarctic. However the reader must wait patiently for the information gleaned by the program, as the final results will not be forthcoming until the late 1960's, due to the time required to process and assess the tremendous amount of data compiled.

Apples to B.C.
