'Finest International Detective Service'

When American Express was formed 106 years ago, the company's only service was carrying goods and valuables between Albany and Buffalo, N. Y. and between Boston and New York City.

However, the firm is best known around the globe for its famous travelers cheques—and least known for its behind-the-scenes corps of special agents who insure the safety of the cheques.

If such cheques are lost or stolen before the owner has countersigned them for spending, American Express replaces them or refunds the money promptly. Then, if theft or robbery is involved, it turns loose its own Special Agents. These are the men of the Inspectors Division, which has been hailed as "the finest international detective service," by none other than Scotland Yard.

Theft, forgery, burglary or any other improper acquisition of travelers cheques, anywhere in the world brings the American Express Inspectors Division into action. In fact, some of the underworld's most notable members have found themselves behind bars because they made the mistake of trying to cash stolen travelers cheques.

Nowadays, big-time professional criminals seldom go for travelers cheques. The work of American Express' special criminal detection bureau is largely aimed against small-time thieves, pickpockets, bag-snatchers and the like, who prey on citizens grown careless or distracted. Vacation-time is especially the busy season. In the typical case, travelers cheques are among loot which a thief has taken from a home or from a person's pocketbook. And whereas the cash or other valuables frequently cannot be traced, many a thief has been brought to justice because of the travelers cheques which bring the American Express agents into action.

The fact that these special agents are protecting a travelers cheque funds makes him feel safer on a tour, cruise or even on an individual trip.

The underworld itself shows the highest respect for American Express operatives. Sometimes when travelers cheques are stolen by a pickpocket or sneak thief along with other loot, his immediate reaction is to rush to the nearest mailbox and send them back to the company. They have learned to worry that, like the Canadian Mounted Police, the Inspectors Division too, "always gets its man."

Outdoors with Marty

By The Canadian Press
By ERIC S. MARTIN

Our neighboring province this year has set aside a considerable area and period so that the bow and arrow hunters may do their stuff undisturbed by firearms users.

This very forward step will doubtless bring archery enthusiasts to Alberta, where they may find hunting quite similar to our own. Bull moose and elk, together with buck mule deer are on the open list, and nobody need fear that the bow is inadequate. Kills on all these animals have already been made, on grizzly too, while at least one well-heeled protagonist made the long trip to Africa with specially made bows and actually filled his two elephant permit.

Since British Columbia can amply cater to any reasonable hunting requirements, we should not fail to invite the archery set to share our bountiful outdoors.

Some heavy spring salmon coming out of local rivers. Hal Windt of Terrace whipped a fifty-four pounder at the Kalum, another better than sixty was captured from the Kitimat, and that great sports angler Osborne Strout surpassed this massive kill with a sixty-four pound fish. This on 18 pound tackle is a worthy reward to a deserving light tackle man. Have a whisper that this is not the largest from the Kitimat this season. More later.

The lovely fishing lady from the County Tyrone had wanted to catch some of our dolly vardens, perhaps not realizing that they are not held in such high esteem as the cutthroat trout she took from Tona Lake. Now Ann Mcaleer may return to the more placid waters of the Strule and the Derg with memories of the stern, rushing, frigid rivers of this newly awakening land, where the visiting angler is but beginning to learn that the gentler Waltonian tackle is woefully out of place.

Some interesting observations, each corroborated, are given by well qualified outdoorsman Al Schutz. With a companion he was driving the old Telkwa road when they spotted a well conditioned mule deer doe fifty yards ahead. She bounced away and disappeared around a bend in the road. Al speeded up for a closer look and she started off again. This continued through four bends in the road until the doe saw that some serious running was necessary to get away from this persistent follower. While Al concentrated on the driving the passenger watched the speedometer until 50 mph was registered. At this stage the doe turned away after having quite evidently extended herself near to the limit, and our two observers feel sure that she maintained 45 mph for a quarter mile.

The same source reports the presence of band-tailed pigeon and mourning dove along highway 16, both of which birds usually stay much further south. Since your scribe has also observed these two species, it would appear that they, (like many other wild things,) follow human settlement; note that the starling is finally establishing himself in this neighborhood.

Your scribe takes off from Terrace on Saturday for the Atlantic seaboard, to return by Labor Day. Expect to try for weakfish in Peconic Bay on Long Island, and for striped bass at Ocracoke, North Carolina; if columns not forthcoming on time, will make up later.

No Charges Laid Yet In Wreck

WINNIPEG (CP) — The mother of two small boys who loosened a siding switch that derailed a Canadian National Railways' train said Tuesday night she does not know whether charges will be laid against them.

In a telephone interview she said, "we haven't heard a word yet." Eight-year-old sons of a railway employee were out picking blueberries when they happened on the unlocked switch, shifted it and were unable to return it to its original position before the train arrived. Later they watched horrified from nearby bush as the CNR'S continental went off the main line near Nourse, 36 miles east of here.

CNR Vice-President J. R. McMillan would neither confirm nor deny a report that it is unlikely charges will be laid against the boys. Mr. McMillan said Tuesday night it may not be known for several days. Juvenile authorities are being consulted.

RADIO-ACTIVE DYNAMITE

By JOHN E. BIRD
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP) — Atomic radio-activity — deadly in large doses—has been added to dynamite to make it safer to handle.

The federal mines department has perfected a method of adding an active but harmless quantity of radioactivity antimony in the dynamite mixture while it is being manufactured. Miners and others handling the explosive thus can use a Geiger counter to locate sticks which have failed to explode or have been lost or misplaced.

The department hopes the development will sharply reduce the number of accidental deaths and injuries from dynamite explosions. Most accidents occur in mines and quarries in logging, farming and construction.

In 1955, 112 accidents in Canada involved explosives, mainly dynamite. Twenty-two persons were killed and 119 injured. Deaths in the 1952-55 period totalled 111 and 534 were injured.
