VARIED RECEPTIONS GIVEN TO THE PRINCE OF WALES IN INDIA

Court Sat Late, Then Jury Acquitted Accused After All Day Session

The last scene in the case of Rex vs. Robert W. Holmes, charged with the murder of Joseph E. Booth at Gumshewa Inlet on January 3, was enacted in the Assize Court before Mr. Justice Macdonald of Vancouver, last night at 11 o'clock, when the jury sitting on the case returned after a little more than half an hour's deliberation and delivered a verdict of not guilty. The verdict came at the end of a long day's session which had been spent entirely with the one case. The judge discharged the prisoner without making any remark, and as he stepped from the box the public section of the room burst into a round of applause which had to be checked by the sheriff. As the verdict was announced a slow smile of relief came over the countenance of the exonerated man, which was equalled only by the smiles of the wife and A. M. Manson, counsel for the defence. As court adjourned and Robert Holmes stepped from the box to his wife's side many persons among the first of whom was E. A. Wakefield, United States consul, gathered around the freed man to extend congratulations with hearty handshakes. There was little doubt, judging from the feelings expressed generally, for the months while Holmes has been imprisoned and the manner in which the verdict was greeted last night that the decision was a popular one; Holmes has been in prison for nearly twelve months ever since he gave himself up to the police following the killing on January 3 and for the past six months has been in Okalla Prison Farm.

In Own Defence.

The case was opened yesterday morning, the evidence for the crown having been concluded by noon. Following the luncheon recess, Holmes was in the witness stand for over two hours giving evidence in his own defence. He was followed by his wife the completion of whose testimony was made before the dinner adjournment. Argument of counsel in the evening was characterized by a brilliant address to the jury which took an hour and a quarter by A. M. Manson, counsel for the defence. Archie Donaghy, counsel for the crown, presented his case briefly and clearly and without bias and the charge to the jury by Mr. Justice Macdonald followed, it taking about an hour's time. The jury retired shortly after ten o'clock and was back with its verdict at eleven.

The Evidence.

Robert W. Holmes, in giving evidence, stated that it had never occurred to him, up to the time of being told by his wife, that there was anything between her and the dead man, Booth. For two weeks preceding the day of the killing she had been ill and a week and a half before January 3 he had decided to break partnership with Booth, realizing that he was too lazy to get ahead. His wife seemed very pleased when she learned of this. He had not mentioned the decision of breaking off with Booth but as both Booth and his wife had been sick he had suggested that they all go back to Kelly's camp. This they had decided to do as soon as the floathouse they were building was completed.

The first time that Booth had said anything to him about his wife was on January 2 when he asked him, "Is Irene sore at

VICTORIA HAS BIG RAINFALL

PAID FINE FOR TAKING DRINK

Progressive Member of Parliament Gets Thirst Like Other People.

REGINA, Dec. 14. — O. R. Gould, progressive member of Parliament, was fined $50 for drinking on the public highway contrary to the liquor laws of Saskatchewan. Mr. Gould pleaded guilty to the offence, acknowledged the thirst and the attempt to quench it, but said that the doctor had prescribed the liquor for sickness.

LLOYD GEORGE CHEERED BY BRITISH COMMONS

Says No Treaty Ever Concluded Received so Universal a Welcome as Irish Agreement.

LONDON, Dec. 14.—While the ratification of the Irish peace treaty was being urged by speakers in the House of Commons, Lloyd George entered and was received with a storm of cheers. He was cheered again when he began to speak on the agreement. "No agreement ever concluded between two peoples received so universal a welcome," he declared.

ULSTER WILL NOT TAKE PART

Premier Craig Writing Lloyd George of Intention to Stand Aloof.

LONDON, Dec. 14.—Ulster's intention to stand aloof from the Irish Free State as provided for in the treaty between Britain and the South of Ireland is expressed in a letter being sent to Lloyd George today from Sir James Craig, the Ulster Premier, according to a Belfast despatch.

EARLY CHRISTMAS MORNING.

By subscribing to the Elks' Christmas Cheer Fund the children may be made happy on the one morning of the year.

Irish Decision on Treaty Postponed Until To-morrow: Correspondence with Ulster

DUBLIN, Dec. 14.—The question of the ratification or rejection of the Anglo-Irish agreement by the Dail Eireann has been postponed until Thursday, when a public session will be held and the members will debate the matter and come to a decision. This was decided upon at yesterday's meeting of the Dail which was called to consider the agreement.

De Valera, alluding to the agreement pending before the Dail, pointed out that divisions of opinion in the cabinet were not extraordinary.

LONDON, Dec. 14.—A special session of Parliament to consider the Irish peace settlement was opened at noon by King George. In the speech the King said; "It is my earnest hope that by articles of agreement submitted to you the strife of centuries may be ended."

Position of Ulster.

LONDON, Dec. 14.—Premier Lloyd George yesterday gave out the correspondence between himself and Premier Craig of Ulster, showing that Ulster consistently refused to submit to an all-Irish parliament, the other British proposals being conceded.

Premier Craig asserted that Ulster's commercial prosperity depended on trade with Great Britain and the granting of a separate fiscal administration involving customs would destroy this. He also objected on principle to submission to an all-Irish parliament.

Lloyd George's letters were chiefly devoted to describing how impossible under the circumstances was the Ulster proposal for a separate government offered in the alternative by Premier Craig. Ulster appears from these letters to be adamant.

QUADRUPLE TREATY SIGNED TODAY BY POWERS INTERESTED

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14. —The new quadruple treaty to preserve the peace of the Pacific was formally signed today by plenipotentiaries of Great Britain, the United States, France and Japan. Right Hon. A. J. Balfour signed twice, first for the British Empire and second for South Africa.

Commander of Raleigh Will Address Canadian Club at Victoria.

VICTORIA, Dec. 14.—H. M. S. Raleigh, the flagship of the British North America and West Indies squadron, arrived here last night on a visit. During the stay in port the commander will address the Victoria Canadian club.

Splendid Reception of Prince of Wales at Benares Follows Lack of Welcoms at Allahabad

LONDON, Dec. 14.—A magnificent reception was accorded the Prince of Wales at Benares following a disappointing display at Allahabad, says a Reuter despatch. This, the despatch states, illustrates the indefiniteness of the Indian unrest. The warm reception at Benares is regarded as of special significance inasmuch as Benares is the holy city of the Hindus.

The people turned out in throngs to greet the Prince in disobeyance of the direct strike orders from the Hindu leader Ghandi.

LONDON, Dec. 14.—Despatches from Allahabad say the town was almost deserted when the Prince of Wales visited it owing to terrorism and intimidation following a boycott among the natives against welcoming the Prince.

Six hundred people have been arrested throughout India, chiefly in Calcutta, following hooliganism in connection with the visit of the Prince. Of 145 arrested in Calcutta on December 10, one was discharged, eight fined and the balance given six months in jail.

SHOOTING AFFRAY AT NELSON FATAL

Man Under Influence of Drug Tries to Take Another's Life—Probably Loses His Own.

NELSON, Dec. 14.—Edmund Ralph, said to be suffering from the effects of a narcotic drug, shot Gus Sternburg, although not fatally, and then drew the gun on the policeman who came to arrest him.

The policeman fired, piercing Ralph's lung, and the wound will probably prove fatal.

AT ASSIZES

Ketchum vs. Babington Case Commenced—Criminal Hearing This Afternoon.

The case of Ketchum vs. Babington over a rock towing contract was commenced in the Supreme Court Assizes before Mr. Justice Macdonald this morning. It was left unfinished so that the case of Rex vs. Isaac Bedore, charged with assault with intent to rape, might be proceeded with this afternoon. The grand jury brought in a true bill in this case this morning.

Col. Peck's Thanks

To My Supporters in Skeena Riding:

I wish to thank you all most heartily for your devoted and loyal support in the late campaign. Just at the present moment the result is still in the balance and uncertain, but whether I'm successful or not I have the same keen feeling of appreciation for what my friends have done for me.

I think it is not boasting to say, few men have had as many faithful and unswerving friends and supporters as I have had. All I can say is, no one appreciates it more than I.

I mean to remain in the contest till the last vote is counted.

I have had little respite from a strenuous life in the past seven years and I am now looking forward to a short holiday and rest from the busy activities of the campaign.

Again I thank you all from the bottom of my heart.

C. W. PECK.

Facilities for Fishing Boats.

The gale which damaged the fishing boats on the waterfront draws attention once more to the lack of accommodation for the local fishing fleet. The Daily News has mentioned this matter from time to time and has tried to impress on the authorities the need for action with a view to having a permanent dock constructed that will shelter the fleet. It is no wonder that boat owners prefer to go south for the winter when they can not leave their vessels tied up here in safety for fear of a southwest wind coming up and sweeping them from their moorings.

Prince Rupert harbor is well suited to handle big shipping and has good shelter for the smaller boats if there was a proper dock. The Provincial Government floats are not intended for the purpose. It was never intended that they should provide a place for all the boats in the harbor to winter. It is not the duty of the Provincial Government to provide such accommodation. The Dominion Government is responsible for docks and wharves and controls the fisheries. They are the ones who should make provision for the fishermen. The Provincial Government and the city might aid in providing facilities, but the main work should be done by the Dominion.

Doubtless the member for the district, when his election is assured, will take the matter up with the new Government after it is formed, but just now little can be done, and it does not seem as if there would be any relief this winter.

Swimming Tank For the Children.

The proposed swimming tank in the Booth Memorial School is primarily for the children. If it is built and arrangements can be made for the public to use it in the evenings and a charge made for the privilege, it will be a distinct privilege. That is a secondary matter. The first thing is to make it possible for all the young people of the city to learn to swim. With all the youngsters swimmers, there will be no difficulty in improving the facilities at the Salt Lake for summer bathing, and it is possible that arrangements may be made also for swimming on this side of the harbor.

Those who are keen on seeing the swimming tank project forwarded should see that the aldermen they elect are favorable to the scheme so that it may be carried forward without delay.

Make Morse Creek Recreation Centre.

Why not make Morse Creek a recreation centre? There is a stream of pure water flowing through it from the mountain. This water would be just as pure and suitable for swimming as the Salt Lake except that it lacks the salt water which is said to be healthful. The Morse Creek is at present an unsightly ditch, whereas it might be a beautiful lake, suitable for swimming in summer and skating in winter. In order to improve it, one of the first things to do would be to raise the dam several feet and make it permanent. Whether the present sort of dam would be sufficiently strong or not we do not know. Eventually it might be made a permanent structure. With the lake well filled with water and the stumps taken out and then some artistic cottages built alongside it with boathouses and bathing houses there would be a great transformation in the appearance of that part of the city.

This work can not be done all in one season. The first thing is to get a good depth of water sufficient to make bathing pleasant and skating attractive. Then the other will follow gradually.

The Salt Lake would still be used as the favorite spot for holidays and for those who have boats. For the hundreds who have no boats and who feel they cannot afford to pay the fare to the lake several times a week, the Morse Lake would provide a swimming place and would be a suitable follow up to the swimming tank proposal of the Rotary Club.

Take Another Look at Morse Creek.

Take another look at Morse Creek and see if this suggestion is not a reasonable one. By taking action at once the city could insist on the most complete sanitary arrangements to prevent any possibility of the otherwise pure water of the lake being fouled. While it would not take much money to begin getting the scheme under way, this is the time to make a beginning so that all plans for building in that section of the city shall conform to the general scheme. The new engineer might take the matter in hand soon and the mayor and council for the coming year might well give it consideration.

NEW APPLICATION OF MORALITY LAW

Case in Victoria Excites Comment of Court—Marriage Ceremony Lacking.

VICTORIA, Dec. 14.—With the comment that such a prosecution opened up very wide and serious questions, and that if the defendants could be considered as coming within the Criminal code as charged, there was no saying where such prosecutions would lead, Magistrate Jay, sitting in the city police court, reserved judgment on the case of a man and woman, charged on the information of Miss Wark, city policewoman, with practicing immorality in the home of a child.

"This opens a wide and serious question," said Magistrate Jay. "I have no doubt there are hundreds and possibly thousands, of people in Canada living as these people are living—people who have not gone through a marriage ceremony. There are also many people who have obtained a divorce in the United States on grounds not recognized in British law, and have since gone through a form of marriage in Canada, who technically might be said to be in the same position as these defendants.

Fate of Children.

"If this section of the code is to be considered to apply to cases of this sort, no one can say where such prosecutions are going to stop, and, if enforced, what would be the result?

"These people are liable to a fine, or, in default, to imprisonment," continued the magistrate, "and in the latter case I have to consider what would become of the children in the meantime. Their support would fall either upon the city or the province. If the fine is not paid, the parents must go to prison; if the fine is paid, the children are deprived of money that should go to feed and clothe them.

"I must have time to very seriously consider what is my duty in this case," concluded Magistrate Jay. "I shall reserve judgment."

STAMP SWINDLERS IN ARGENTINE REPUBLIC

Sale of Bogus Five-cent Stamps Has Been Going on for Years.

BUENOS AIRES, Dec. 14.—A swindle of large proportions has been perpetrated on the Argentine postoffice department by the printing and sale of false five-cent stamps. The sale of these stamps has apparently has been going on possibly for years, but it was only recently discovered. The department has ordered the withdrawal of the issue in question.

The postoffice department admitted that the fraudulent stamps were practically identical with the authorized ones and that it was not possible to trace the source of the questionable supply.

Five-cent stamps bearing the portrait of General San Martin no longer are accepted in payment for postage.

PENALTY FOR LAW EVADERS

Death to Those Who Will Not Pay in Some Parts of Russia.

ROSTOFF - ON - DON, Russia, Dec. 14.—The death penalty is being inflicted in the Kuban and Don districts upon peasants who attempt to evade the grain tax which the government has instituted instead of money taxes. At Krasnodarsk a peasant and two officials whom he bribed to assist him in dodging the grain levy were all shot. Radical steps are being taken throughout South Russia to check the banditry which the Moscow government denounces as nothing more than an effort to escape taxation.

General Budenny, the cavalry leader who figured so prominently in the fighting against General Wrangel and the Poles, has been made a member of the central council in the Caucasus which is endeavoring to check movements against Moscow government authority. In a recent report he announced that the best results are obtained by taking hostages in the various villages and forcing the villagers themselves to capture the bandit leaders and surrender them. Where the villagers have refused to give up the bandits it has sometimes been necessary to destroy the villages as a warning to other offenders.

SWEDES FOR RUSSIA.

STOCKHOLM, Dec. 14.—Swedish farmhands have been organized by Communists for the purpose of emigrating to Russia. This has been brought about by the constantly falling prices of wheat and the fact that farmers all over the country have made agreements with their workers at lower wages.

Canada's Opportunity in China Set Forth Clearly by Adviser to Delegation

By BEN DEACON
Staff Correspondent of the Canadian Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—The questions relating to China which are now under consideration at the Washington conference should be of particular interest to the people of Canada, for their satisfactory settlement may be of great importance in connection with the future development of the Dominion. This opinion was expressed by one of the advisers of the Chinese delegation in the course of an interview with the Canadian Press.

"For both Canada and the United States China offers greater trade possibilities than almost any other portion of the globe," he said. "If China is given an opportunity to develop, unhampered by the adverse conditions which have prevailed in the past, there will undoubtedly be opened up a great new market for the goods of the two great nations of this continent. Canada is in a particularly fortunate position for taking advantage of this new field."

This spokesman, who requested that his name be withheld, is considered one of the world's greatest authorities on matters relating to China. He has lived for thirty years in that country and is in very close touch with the members of the Chinese delegation. He is also familiar with conditions in Canada, having travelled extensively in the Dominion. In connection with work in China he has studied Canada's commercial possibilities in the Orient, and is convinced that, as a result, steps which will be taken by the nations represented at the conference toward the rehabilitation of China, future years will see a great flow of trade from the Dominion to the great Oriental republic.

The industries of British Columbia will benefit particularly, he believes, and the first result so far as Canada is concerned will be the acceleration of industrial development of that province.

Friendly Feeling.

"Canada is becoming increasingly well and favorably known in China," he said. "J. W. Ross, your trade commissioner in Shanghai, has done remarkably good work in promoting the interests of the Dominion and in advertising the country there. A number of Canadian commercial houses also have representatives in China and they, too, have helped to spread a general knowledge of their country in Chinese business circles.

"The Chinese people have a very friendly feeling toward Canada. Their business dealings with the commercial representatives of the Dominion have been satisfactory and they have learned that Canadians are to be trusted. The way has therefore already been opened and when the development of China comes as a result of what will be accomplished here, Canada I am sure, will profit by it."

This spokesman agrees that much which the conference will decide in regard to China will be of a provisional character. The Chinese themselves realize that this is essential, he says. They are not in a hurry. They have no expectation of completely changing the status and condition of their country over night. They are content that they at last have an opportunity of laying their case before the world; that they apparently have won the good will and a sincere promise of assistance from the great majority of the nations; that many of the limitations under which they believe their country's development has been restricted are to be carefully considered with a view to their ultimate removal; and that they have opportunity of bringing other matters which they consider an infringement of their rights before a fair and sympathetic tribunal.

Want No Interference.

As to present conditions in China, the assertion is made by this advocate of the Chinese case that the surface indications convey a wrong impression. The claims of the several "governments" and the rivalries of different leaders who have obtained temporary ascendency in various parts of the country have served to obscure the real sentiment of the mass of the people. This, he declares, is solidly behind the prepresentatives of China.

"The Chinese people want to work out their destiny in their own way without any interference from outside," he said. "That is their one desire, the one object upon which they are solidly united. Despite factional struggles and differences in regard to matters of purely domestic importance, the people are as one on this question. The delegates who are in Washington now, though nominally the representatives of the Peking government, are in reality speaking for the mass of the Chinese people of the south as well as those of the north."

China's past history, this spokesman continued, has been a series of entanglements with various other nations. The Chinese people had turned first to one power and then to another in the hope of obtaining betterment of their condition. The result was that the Chinese government soon drifted into the policy of playing one power against the other with the object of bargaining for assistance. The result was a series of agreements and treaties in which China gradually bartered away her national status and became disintegrated and politically impotent.

China's Opportunity.

Today for the first time China finds herself in a position to deal with the other nations collectively, he continued. Matters which would have taken years to clear up by dealing separately with the interested nations individually can now be laid upon the international council table and can be disposed of in a spirit of open friendliness and consideration of the rightful interests of all parties. Moreover it is apparent that China, in this conference, has the good-will of the other nations, which are united in a sincere desire to help her. This is China's great opportunity. The Chinese people realize this, he added, and at heart they are a solid mass behind the delegates who are pleading their cause."

"The man I marry," the haughty young lady declared pompously, "must be a hero."

"He will be," answered the disappointed suitor.

Canada's Position Reviewed; Corrective Policy Outlined at Bank of Montreal Annual

Sir Vincent Meredith, the President, Deals With the Manner in Which Canada Has Withstood Shock of Deflation and Readjustment—Railway Problem Must Have Attention—Necessity of Vigorous Policy of Immigration Strongly Urged.

Sir Frederick Williams-Taylor, the General Manager, in Report to Shareholders, Pointed Out That Even After a Difficult Year the Position of the Bank Was Stronger Than Ever—Canada Must Turn Experience of the Past to the Advantage of the Future.

The annual meeting of the Bank of Montreal attracted very special attention, owing to the exceptional conditions Canada is passing through, as a result of the deflation that is occurring throughout the world. The meeting of the Bank of Montreal is the first of the larger banks to be held and Sir Vincent Meredith, the President, and Sir Frederick Williams Taylor, the General Manager, dealt not only with conditions that had actually arisen within the country, but the important influences of developments in outside centres. Special emphasis was also laid on the course that Canada should follow to work out of some of the difficulties that now beset the country.

Referring to the principal problems of the Dominion and how to deal with them, Sir Vincent pointed out that in his opinion they were represented by the necessity of dealing with the railway situation and by establishing an aggressive policy of immigration. Touching on the railway situation, Sir Vincent made it clear that it had been his consistent practice to avoid anything savoring of politics and if he did allude to the railway question it was only because it related intimately to public finances, to taxation and so to the daily business of the country, which was already bearing heavy imposts to sustain the public credit.

Conditions in Canada.

In dealing with conditions in Canada and the manner in which many of the difficulties might be overcome, Sir Vincent said:

"In the most propitious circumstances of trade, prophecy is rash and in the complicated conditions that now beset us, I will refrain from the risk of forecast. What we know is that Canada has withstood the shock of deflation and readjustment in a manner which has afforded vindication to our own people and has caused much favorable comment abroad, but a return to pre-war standards cannot be expected at once and probably not for a considerable time to come.

"The position is still full of difficulties and the way to sustained improvement is not yet clear. While there has been a revival in some lines of business, in others deflation has not yet run its course and stocks are being carried which possibly may have to be written down to lower replacement values.

"The revival now being experienced, possibly based upon a demand in consequence of depleted stocks, has given a temporary spurt to buying. In any event, I look for a period of rises and falls as demand exceeds supply, or otherwise.

"A return to normality will be hastened if and when labor realizes that war deflation wages cannot be continued and that the changed conditions necessitate more efficiency and greater production if we are to compete successfully in the world's markets. Increased production will without doubt be followed by a lowering of prices, larger consumption and fuller employment."

Washington Conference.

In conclusion, Sir Vincent expressed the opinion that there was reason to expect very beneficial results from the Washington conference on the limitation of armaments. In summing up the results of the conference, Sir Vincent said:—

"Though the utmost hopes may not be fulfilled, great gain will come from reduction of expenditure on armaments and the lessened taxation thereby made possible. In no small measure the restoration of normal trade depends upon the outcome of the conference. A happy issue will give that confidence which creates credit and will go far towards abridging the period of liquidation and reconstruction."

General Manager's Address.

Sir Frederick Williams-Taylor, the General Manager, in his address to the shareholders, referred more particularly to the affairs of the Bank and the manner in which the various developments of the year had been met.

Sir Frederick also touched interestingly on the relations between the United States and Canada and the large discount at which the Canadian dollar was still quoted. In this connection, Sir Frederick said:—

"The premium on New York funds is still with us with little prospect of departure in the near future. The rate is 8 7-8 p.c. today, as compared with 15 p.c. on the 5th December, 1920. The fact that Canadians have become accustomed to the penalty of doing business abroad with an inferior domestic dollar does not alter the fact that Canada is at a very serious disadvantage indeed in its monetary dealings with the United States of America.

"I shall not go into the matter, as it has been dealt with in my previous report, except to say that the premium on New York funds will not disappear until we buy many millions less of goods and materials abroad or increase our exports.

"The premium would have been higher had it not been that Canada as stated elsewhere, has borrowed in the United States this year $115,000,000, which sum, as far as exchange is concerned, must be added to our exports or deducted from our imports.

"Every Canadian should understand, however, that this is merely alleviation, not cure. Economically, it would be far better that we should borrow within our own borders. By borrowing abroad we add steadily to the already great sum of interest on our foreign obligations annually sent out of the country, the capital amount aggregating nearly $3,500,000,000. Canada still maintains its excellent credit position in the New York market, and no difficulty has been experienced in floating such loans as have been offered."

Have Mortgaged Future.

Reviewing the general conditions in the country, Sir Frederick pointed out the necessity of paying the penalty of having mortgaged our future in the building of superfluous railways and in other extravagances. Summing up the situation in this regard, Sir Frederick said in part:—

"As regards the outlook in Canada and the prospect as affecting Canadian business generally, I have no desire to join the list of oracles who predict the date when normal conditions will be restored. For one thing, values are out of joint. Our main dependence is on our natural resources, and at present the purchasing power of the products thereof is at the lowest level reached for several years past. On the other hand, we still have with us high prices in other directions, while retail prices generally are conspicuously out of line.

"The cause of this anomaly is still mainly the cost of labor. Unemployment is the natural corrective though painful and regretted by everyone.

"Apart from this, I cannot see how we can count upon improved conditions concurrently with trade revival in the United States. Conditions are similar in many respects, as everyone knows, but our liabilities and our mistakes are our very own. Aside from the cost of the war, we must pay the penalty of having mortgaged our future in the building of superfluous railway and in other extravagances.

"It is all very well to talk about our vast resources, but we as a people have pledged those resources and wasted our substance to an extent only now being realized. Evidence of this is, first in the great sum of nearly two hundred million dollars annually sent abroad to meet the interest on our debts; and, second, that our dollar is at a serious discount in the United States, with which country we trade so heavily.

"The Canadian resources that remain intact are the manhood of the Dominion and the industry and ambition of our citizens. In these respects Canada is still rich, and, having learned our lesson from that inexorable teacher, stern experience, we shall emerge from our difficulties in time a wiser nation and then proceed to the full development of a great inheritance on a sound and sure basis, turning the experience of the past to the advantage of the future."

The Tobacco of Quality

The West Coast of Pitt Island

By P.M. Monckton, B.C.L.S.

Among the districts visited by Prince Rupert motor launch enthusiasts, the series of inlets and channels along the west coast of Pitt Island is perhaps less known that it deserves to be. Leaving the main steamship route at Gibson Island turn to the southwest down Ogden Channel for about ten miles until the wide expanse of open water is reached at its end. Here Pitt Island turns sharply to the southeast at Comrie Head, while to the southwest lies MacCauley Island and to the west is the innumerable group of small islands know as the Kitkatla Islands.

The shore of Pitt Island along Ogden Channel is nearly all very steep, the only break being at Alpha Bay where there is a small flat at the mouth of a large stream and a shack thereon. After rounding Comrie Head Petrel Channel is entered, and the waterway narrows down until four miles further on at Captain Cove it is less than a mile wide.

Captain Cove.

Captain Cove is an inlet about two miles long and quarter of a mile wide and affords fine shelter for small craft. At the head is a large stream up which goes a trail leading to one of the finest trout lakes in the country. In Captain Cove will be seen Davies rafts tied up by the Ocean Falls Company after being towed across Hecate Straits.

Petrel Channel grows narrower as we proceed South and winds considerably and the tides become strong. Five miles south from Captain Cove is Mount Noble, called by the old timers Lofty, some 2800 feet high. The writer had occasion to ascend his mountain twice and from the summit is to be seen a view which must be very hard to beat, with Banks, Bonilla, MacCauley and many smaller islands spread out like a map below while across Hecate Straits the Queen Charlottes can easily be picked out. This mountain is quite easy of ascent and dominates everything else in the vicinity.

Newcombe Harbor is a narrow inlet about two miles long and is a fair anchorage for a launch and is surrounded by high steep hills. The chart of all the neighborhood here bears not the very faintest resemblance to the reality. At this point Petrel is barely a quarter of a mile wide and the tides run four miles an hour at times. However to the south it widens out and at the south end of MacCauley is over two miles wide.

Dangerous Rapids.

Six miles from Newcombe Harbor is the longest inlet on Pitt Island, Hevenor Inlet, not shown on the chart. It is half a mile wide and runs due east for seven miles; it then turns south and narrows down to a hundred yards for a distance of half a mile, before turning again to the east, where it is choked with boulders and rocks and forms a most violent and dangerous rapids about 200 yards long. Inside these it widens out to form a basin about six miles in length, shut in by high bare granite mountains 3000 feet or more in elevation. Some four miles further on is a maze of islands and channels impossible to describe and not at all as shown on the chart. A wonderful country for a small boat to cruise in. Between here and Minktrap Bay, ten miles away, there is a narrow channel with many rocks and strong tides in places which separates Pitt Island from Anger Island. Off this passage there are at least six inlets of various sizes penetrating far into the mountains of Pitt Island. Anger Island itself though small is a labyrinth of narrow winding channels, some of which we explored with a dory and Evinrude.

Passing through the channel to the east of Anger Island we reach Principe Channel near Minktrap Cove, where there are several more inlets and islands. Here in a bay we met old friends from Porcher Island, Frank Lundy and Muskeg from Iona River and W. Lane from Lewis Island. Below Minktrap is Principe Channel, a wide channel, in which the westerly winds of summer make quite a swell. Below here the coast of Pitt Island is not of much interest, being more exposed and with no harbors except Port Stevens and a long unnamed inlet one mile below it.

All the country described here has the usual attractions in the way of hunting and fishing that we expect in Prince Rupert vicinity, added to the fact of not being much visited. Deer, bear, wolves and ducks abound and most of the country is easy to travel through, especially MacCauley Island. As seen from the summit of Mount Noble nearly all the interior of this island is open rolling country with only low hills and many lakes, and would well repay further investigation.

NEW MEANS DEVISED TO HARVEST LARGE CANADIAN POTATO CROPS

The province of Alberta during the year of 1921 yielded seven and three-quarter million bushels of potatoes. This is a new level in "spud" raising and has never been reached before. Potato raising in this Canadian province has in a few years expanded to such an extent that it necessitated the finding of new means to harvest the huge crops. The four horse or tractor drawn potato digger is now being used by Albertans. The potatoes are stored in caves to prevent freezing.

me?" He had replied that she was for the grumpy way in which he had been acting and his laziness. Holmes had told Booth that if he was not satisfied he was under no obligation to stay. There was no anger and no heat between them on this occasion. Nothing had occurred that would lead him to believe that the relations between his wife and Booth were strange. That evening he had noticed Booth cleaning a shotgun in his (Holmes) cabin. His wife seemed nervous so he asked Booth to put the gun away which he did. Later he started flashing a torch around as if looking for something. Holmes asked him what he wanted and he said that Irene had hidden something of his. He told his wife if she had anything of Joe's to give it back to him. They played the gramophone for a while and Booth went out for the night to his own cabin.

Heard Gunshot.

The next morning, Booth was apparently in good spirits and he ate a good breakfast. They went to work on the float-house and in the course of the morning Booth went back to the house. While he was away, he heard Boooth fire a shot and when he returned he asked him what it was about. He replied that his gun had fallen on the floor and had gone off. He took the gun away from him and unloaded the shells.

At 12:30 they went to the house for dinner. Neither his wife nor Booth ate much. The former had been ill and Booth had a drink or so. He remarked on the fact that he was the only person who was eating. After lunch he cleaned up the cabin. His wife was sick and lying on the bed. She came over to him and asked him to tell Joe to go out so that he could give her attention. He told Booth to do so and after some hesitating he finally did go out.

Tells Her Husband.

He told his wife to return to bed but she said, "Come her, sweetheart, I have something to tell you. Crazy Joe loves me and I have been in hell for the past two months." Then she told the story of the various incidents when he had declared himself in objectionable manner. He had said on several occasions that he wanted an understanding but she had replied that there could be no understanding such as he wanted. She had threatened to tell her husband but he had said that he would kill him if she did. He always accompanied these threats with the handling of his pistol which he was carrying constantly on his person. Finally she could stand it no longer and had decided to tell.

Head in a Whirl.

His wife's story had thrown him in a rage and he decided immediately to go to Booth's cabin and have it out with his fists. Despite the pleading and warning of his wife, in which she said that Booth would kill him, he broke away and went to Booth's cabin unarmed. He found him there lying on the bed with an empty holster at his side. Asking him what was the matter, he had replied that he had the "flu." "If you have the flu why don't you take your boat and get out," he said. Booth replied that he be all right and got up and went towards Holmes' cabin, the latter following him closely. He went to the bench and lay down and the wife had suggested that they go duck hunting. Not knowing what to do, and his head in a whirl, he got the shotgun and loaded it and started for the beach with his wife. In the meantime Booth had gone out but he had not seen where he had gone. He called at his cabin at the beach and finding him not there called for him. There was no answer and he suddenly realized that Booth might be in the bush somewhere waiting to take a "pot shot" at him. He determined to get back to his own cabin to get under cover. No sooner had he got in than he heard Booth approaching and he entered a few seconds later. He went to the bench and commenced taking off his shoe saying that he had been in a dejirium and had stepped into the chuck. He got one shoe and sock off and then went to the window. Returning to the bench he sat down and rested his head on his hands and asked Holmes to get some water so that he might put fomentations on his head.

Shot His Man.

"It came to me like a flash that the man wanted me to turn my back so that he might get a shot at me. I said "You have done me a dirty trick" and he made a quick movement. I grabbed the shotgun which I had laid aside and shot him. My mind was in a whirl and I was in a state of collapse. I do not know how many times I shot, how often I hot him or where I hit him. I went to the door and told my wife and she went into hysterics. We went to the beach and I gave myself up to Barr tellingshim that I had shot him and that he had a gun on him."

Finally, at Holmes' request, Barr had taken him in charge and after gathering up some of their possessions they had gone to Kelly's camp. Nothing further had happened outside of the inquest.

Questioned by Mr. Manson, Holmes said that he was convinced from seeing the empty holster on the table in Booth's cabin that he was armed. He suspected that he had it in his shirt and had made up his mind that he did. His head was in a whirl and he was blind with rage.

Found Notes.

W. Barr was then recalled to the witness stand. He testified to finding a note between the matresses of Booth's bed. The note read; "Dear Bobbie—I am tired of life. Irene will tell you all. I have been dishonest." In Booth's money belt another document had been found which asked that all his possessions be bequeathed to Mr. and Mrs. Holmes and that his remains be thrown to the waves off his launch, the Tilly. Both notes had been in Booth's handwriting.

Questioned by D. W. Morrissey, foreman of the jury, Barr said that he did not believe Holmes had had an opportunity to return to the scene between the time of his arrest and the inquest. The documents he believed were genuine.

Following the story of his wife, Holmes had tried not to let Booth get out of his sight. "When I told him he had done me a dirty trick I felt that it was his life or mine. I knew that he was faking illness and I felt positive he had a gun on him although I never saw it. The whole thing happened instantly and I fired point blank at him without taking aim.

Mr. Justice Macdonald asked a few questions of the accused.

"Why did you not tell him you thought he had a gun?"

"I was too nervous and excited to think of it."

"Do you think you gave him a fair chance? You had a shotgun and you thought he had a pistol."

Mr. Donaghy made a brief cross examination.

"Holmes, I am going to put it up direct to you," said the prosecutor. "Was it what your wife told you or was it because you were afraid that he would

THE COUGH with that TicklishSensation

A little tickling in the throat; now and then a dry, barking cough; you think it is not bad enough to bother about, but every hack makes a breach in the system, strains the lungs and prepares the way for more serious trouble.

How many people have lost a good night's rest by that nasty, tickling, irritating sensation in the throat? The dry, harsh cough keeps you awake, and when you get up in the morning you feel as if you had had no rest at all.

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP

is just the remedy you require to stop that irritating, tickling cough on account of its soothing, healing and expectorant properties.

Mrs. P. Johnson, Port Alberni, B. C., writes:—"I have suffered for years, off and on, with a tickling cough. I could not sleep nights and had to sit up in bed to get relief, in fact, I coughed so I used to vomit. I tried different doctors' prescriptions until I heard of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. I tried it and found great relief after I had taken the first bottle and have not been troubled since. I shall always keep it in the house."

Be sure and get "Dr. Wood's" when you ask for it. Price, 35c and 60c a bottle; put up only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Headaches Gone

Perhaps you can imagine what this means to one who had suffered terribly with headaches for ten years.

Read about it in this latter.

Mrs. Tena A. Smith, Country Harbor Cross Roads, N. S., writes:

"I feel that if anyone can recommend Dr. Chase's medicines I certainly can. I suffered for ten years from severe headaches, and although I took all kinds of headache powders they just relieved me at the time. I became very nervous and run-down, and everything seemed to trouble me. I have taken eighteen boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and it has made an entirely new person of me. I felt that I could not have lived without it. I do not have one headache now for every hundred I used to have, and my nerves are good and strong. I just weighed 109 pounds when I began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and now I weigh 121. Knowing what this treatment has done for me, I cannot too highly recommend it to others."

COURT SAT LATE, THEN JURY ACQUITTED ACCUSED AFTER ALL DAY SESSION

shoot you that made you kill him?"

"Because I thought he would shoot me."

"Did you expect there would be gun play?"

"Yes, I expected it if I told him that my wife had told me."

"You said in your signed statement that you did this in defence of your home. Now you say that you did it because you were afraid he would shoot you. How do you explain that?"

"Well, if he shot me he would certainly wreck my home."

Wife's Evidence.

Mrs. Holmes evidence largely bore out that given by her husband. She told the details of the assaults and attempts on her person made by Booth. On January 2 she had told her husband of them all. When she had finished he stood trembling, white as sheet and with perspiration standing out. With her arms about him she had pleaded that he should not approach Booth but he disregarded this and went to his cabin. Booth had done everything possible to alienate her affections but she had believed nothing wrong of her husband, despite what Booth had said. She had feared to tell him of what happened on account of Booth's threats.

"If you had always been in the confidence of your husband why did you not tell him of what happened when you went out with Booth on the boat the day he was sick. Did you not realize that what he had attempted to do was a crime? Was it not your duty to tell your husband then?" asked the judge.

"I realize it now."

"You have heard the note that was read written by Booth. Does that not sound like the wail of a man who proposed to do something to himself?"

"I do not know."

Manson's Address.

A. M. Manson, counsel for the defence, made a brilliant and clever appeal in addressing the jury. He touched on the youth and inexperience of the accused who was little more than a boy. He had a clean and clear face, a good upbringing and a record without a single blemish. They could be confident that he was not a criminal. One look at him would convince them of that. Booth had been one of those unfortunate creatures who had sunk to the lowest level of degeneracy, the type that found pleasure in preying on innocent womanhood. The jury should get a clear view of the affair and close out all but the members of the party of three. Did Holmes have time to think of what he was doing when all these events transpired so soon after his wife's confession? The whole proceedings had perhaps taken no more than twelve or fifteen minutes. "It is impossible to say what one of them would have done under similar circumstances."

The story that the wife had told would have set any man afire. It had been no fault of Booth's that he had not committed a crime which still stands in British Law on the same level as murder and treason. He had threatened Holmes' life if the wife should tell. There was no mistaking his intention if the wife had told and she had realized this, as had Holmes after he had been told. No one can honestly say that here was not an excuse for the husband to completely lose control of himself. One cannot think that Holmes was wrong in his belief that Booth would get him. There are two types of men, first, the one who gesticulates when he is told such a story, second, the one who chokes up and does not say a word. There is no doubt about who is the most dangerous. Holmes had been of the latter type. He had been unable to say a word when the wife had told her story. I am going to ask His Worship to tell you that when a man is wholly deprived of his self-control by something that has been told him then he is wholly or partialy excused for his action. Again Holmes had been told of the many threats on his life. You cannot say that Holmes' story is untruthful. Finally remember that if there is a doubt by British Law this doubt must go to the prisoner's benefit. Do not think you can ever rest your minds in peace unless you come out of the jury room and acquit the man."

Donaghy For Crown.

A. Donaghy, counsel for the crown, dealt fluently and ably with his case. The accused had not gone after Booth until after the wife had told him of the threats against his life. He did not lay hands on Booth when he had the opportunity at his cabin. If he had believed that Booth was awaiting to take a pot shot at him, why had he not got the drop on him when he had the opportunity and taken the gun away from him. "I submit that Holmes did not believe that Booth was armed. The evidence shows beyond all doubt that Booth was not armed when he was shot. The question before you is: 'Did Holmes shoot in self defence or was it murder? Did he give Booth a fair chance?' Holmes started the gun play. I leave the matter in your hands."

Lengthy Charge.

Mr. Justice Macdonald delivered a length charge to the jury touching on the various aspects of the case. The surroundings of the case were somewhat in favor of the accused but while that feeling existed the jury must remember that it was standing between society and the prisoner. It was up to them to decide irrespective of sympathies whether murder or manslaughter had been committed. It was up to them to determine if the facts were sufficient to create the apprehension that Holmes' life was in danger. The defence had made a pathetic, and clever appeal that the sanctity of the home had been at stake. That was not a matter for the jury to determine. The judge's charge was clearly a recommendation for a verdict of manslaughter being returned.

Asked by the foreman of the jury regarding the law in a case where the wife's honor was involved, Mr. Justice Macdonald stated that there was no such law as the "unwritten law" recognized in Canada. No one was justified in taking the law into his own hands but circumstances might arise where a man finds his wife in adultery with another man. Then the killing of one or both might be partly justifiable and the crime might be reduced from that of murder to manslaughter.

Donaghy Congratulates.

Mr. Donaghy, after the verdict, was the first to congratulate Mr. Manson on the able defence he had put up on behalf of his client.

The News yesterday commented on the Crown Prosecutor, Mr. Donaghy not having a copy of the transcript of the evidence of the previous trial. The Judge's criticism was leveled at the Attorney General's Department for not furnishing Mr. Donaghy with the transcript, and not at Mr. Donaghy himself. Mr. Donaghy has had considerable experience in criminal law, having appeared in murder trials before and successfully acquiting his client.

TRADES AND LABOR MET LAST EVENING

Support Swimming Tank—Preparing for Civic Election—Measures Against Orientals.

There was a large attendance at the regular meeting of the Trades and Labor Council which was held last evening in the Carpenters' Hall. S. D. Macdonald, president, was in the chair and he gave a report of an interview with Ald. George Kerr, chairman of the board of works, regarding the unemployment situation.

The building of a swimming tank by the city was heartily endorsed, and the hope was expressed that the one built would be large enough to accommodate all the children in the city. Aldermanic candidates will be questioned as to their attitude on the question.

The legislative committee was instructed to prepare a slate for the municipal election which will be held in January. They will report at the next meeting which will be held in a fortnight.

Oriental Exclusion.

It was decided to take joint action with the G. W. V. A. in reference to the formation of an Oriental Exclusion League here. It was found recently that a few Orientals had found their way back into the railway service. The matter was taken up immediately and, with the assistance of Colonel C. W. Peck, these Chinese have been replaced by white men. Steps are being taken to prevent Orientals from returning to the railway employ during the period when the railway control is passing from the present government to a new one.

Why it is Good

Quite often we are asked why Pacific Milk has a flavor so much like fresh, sweet cream. Partly, it is because of our improved processes, but much is due to the milk itself which comes from the famous dairy herds of the Fraser Valley. The quality of Pacific Milk remains high, because the dairying standards are high, and under no conditions would we try to change this quality.

YAP TROUBLE IS SETTLED

United States and Japan Agree on Policy in Regard to Pacific Island.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—The United States and Japan have concluded a formal agreement to leave the suzerainty of the Island of Yap with Japan but cable and radio rights are equalized. This settled a long standing dispute.

The opposition of the United States to the Japanese mandatories in the Far East, although centred on Yap were not confined to this island, but included all of the islands in the Pacific Ocean north of the equator which formerly belonged to Germany. These "gems of the Oriental seas," of which Yap is one, aggregate 127 and are comprised in four groups, namely the Carolines with 62, the Marshall with 32, the Marianne (or Ladrone) with 25, and Pelew with 8. Japan secured control over these islands through a mandate granted by the Paris Peace Conference. The protest of the United States is based mainly on the ground that Yap is indispensable for the purpose of cable communication in the Pacific, and therefore should not be under the control of any one power. International ization of the island is demanded.

Name Changed.

Yap was originally known as Guap or Wap, this name having been given to the island by the Spanish navigators who discovered it in the sixteenth century. Until 1885 Yap, like all the other of the Carolines, was owned by Spain. Germany at this time cast covetous eyes upon Yap, realizing that it would prove an important link in communication with Japan, China, The Philippines, the Dutch East Indies, and New Guinea, and that it was a convenient station on the trans-Pacific route via Honolulu to San Francisco.

In 1885 Germany sent a gunboat to the Carolines and coolly raised the German flag upon Yap and several of the other Islands. The Spanish Government protested to the Vatican against this daring theft, and through the intervention of the Pope the islands were returned to Spain. Fourteen years later, however, Spain sold the Carolines, including Yap, and the Pelew and all of the Marianne Islands, except Guam, to Germany for $4,500,000. Guam, which is 360 miles from Yap, had been purchased by the United States from Spain in 1898.

Japanese Mandate.

When the war began, Japanese naval forces seized the Ladrone, Pelew, and Caroline Islands, including Yap, and held them up to the end of the great conflict. The Paris Peace Conference on May 7, 1919, decided that the mandate for the Pacific Islands north of the equator formerly held by Germany should be awarded to Japan, while mandates for those south of the equator were given to Australia and New Zealand. The terms of the mandate gave the Japanese government "full powers of administration and legislation" over the islands, which were classed among the former German possessions which could "best be administered under the laws of the Mandatory as integral portions of its territory," subject to certain safeguards respecting liberty of conscience and religion for the natives.

Was Troubled With Her Liver for over 4 months

When the liver becomes slow, sluggish and torpid it is not working properly and does not supply sufficient bile to thoroughly act on the bowels and carry off the waste products of the system, hence the bowels become clogged up, the bile gets into the blood, constipation sets in and liver troubles follow, among which are sick or bilious headaches, heartburn, water brash, jaundice, floating specks before the eyes, pain under the right shoulder, coated tongue, bad breath, yellow eyes, etc.

MILBURN'S LAXA-LIVER PILLS

quickly remove the secretions, clear away the effete and waste matter by acting directly on the liver, and making the bile pass through the bowels instead of allowing it to get into the blood.

Mrs. Alice McHill, Napanee, Ont., writes:—"I was very badly run down for over four months. I tried several remedies, but got no relief. One day my husband brought me home a vial of Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills, and before I had used half of it I was much better. I only used two vials and I am a different person today.

"I can safely recommend Laxa-Liver Pills to anyone troubled with liver trouble."

Price, 25c a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.
