Quintuplets Are Seen On Screen

Captivating Feature on Current Program at Capital Theatre—Pictures of Norway Raid

A captivating feature of the current program on the screen of the Capitol Theatre is a film about the Dionne quintuplets, bringing moviegoers up to date on these very popular young Canadian ladies who are now nearing their seventh birthday. The film is narrated by Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe and, in addition to some scenes of their earlier life, there are new pictures. The quints are seen knitting socks for soldiers and singing the chorus of "There'll Always be an England." Some of the Capitol patrons last night were heard to remark that the Dionne film was alone worth the price of admission.

There is also an exceptionally good news reel on this bill, featuring unusual pictures of a recent foray by the Royal Navy on the German-ocupied Lofoten Islands on the Norway coast.
