PTA told of changes in school

A comparison of educational methods and techniques used 20 years ago as compared with those of today, was the interesting and provocative subject explored by J. M. Phillipson, School District 52 superintendent, when he addressed the members of Conrad School Parent-Teacher association last week.

Mr. Phillipson said that in 1939 there were 30 teachers for every job, while today there are 30 jobs for every teacher.

He pointed out that today after six weeks in school, Grade 1 children are able to read and that 20 years ago they would still have been struggling with alphabetical sounds around Easter.

Mr. Phillipson said that changes in educational methods were brought about by changing times and changes in educational needs. The public has a large voice in determining what kind of education our children receive, Mr. Phillipson said.

In other business a full and comprehensive report on the various sessions of the recent Regional conference held in Terrace was submitted by PTA president Mrs. John Denning who attended with Conrad PTA members Mrs. A. S. Marshall and Mrs. J. Micholuk.

Mrs. R. C. Barbour's Grades 4 and 5 classroom won the attendance pennant for the month
