Five die as N.S. fire destroys home

SYDNEY MINES, N.S. (CP)—Five children in one family were burned to death early today when fire destroyed a two-storey, two-family home in nearby Black Point. The children's parents and one child escaped the flames, as did seven members of the other family in the house.

Dead are John Joseph, 15; Marcilla, 14; Charlotte, 11; Camillus, 13, and Margaret, 4, all children of Mr and Mrs. Wilfred Harrietha.

The parents escaped with a son Wilfred, 12. Mr. and Mrs. George Forrest and their five children, escaped through a second-floor window.

The fire was believed caused by an overheated stove.

BLACKWOOD on BRIDGE

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

Mr. New, the avid kibitzer, "plays" a whale of a game from the sidelines where he has the slight advantage of being able to see all four hands.

He can't understand why he doesn't do better on the infrequent occasions when he gets into the game. He attributes his constant losses to bad breaks—most of which could have been avoided by more practical and sensible bidding and play.

He had no chance for today's four-heart contract. The jack of clubs was led and he won with the king when both dummy and Mr. Masters ducked. Now in spite of the fact that he found both red suits divided as evenly as possible, he went set on the hand, losing two clubs, a heart and a diamond.

"There's something wrong with the book if I couldn't make that hand," he said unreasonably.

Mr. New

"Could I have made game at no trump?"

"No, you'd have been down at three no trump, too," replied Mr. Masters. "You got off the track with your jump rebid of three hearts. It would have been all right if Dale had responded in diamonds or clubs, but it wasn't justified when he bid your void."

"It looked to me like a seven-trick hand," continued Mr. New stubbornly. "I figured on five tricks in hearts and two in the minor suits."

"Let's put it this way," said Mr. Masters patiently. "When you're void in your partner's suit it's sensible to think that some of the expected tricks from his hand may not materialize. In such cases your own hand should be stronger than usual."

Mr. New wouldn't let it go. "I've been reading a book on point count recently," he said, "and by that count I had 15 points in high cards, three points for a void suit, one point for my fifth trump and two points for my sixth trump. That makes 21 points—plenty for the jump rebid in hearts."

"There's nothing wrong with the book," said Mr. Masters, "but practical experience tells us that when some of our points derive from a void in partner's suit, it's better to forget them. In this particular case that would leave you with 18 points—so your correct rebid was two hearts."

Toronto Maple Leafs eliminated Montreal Canadiens in the Stanley Cup semi-final 14 years ago tonight, winning the total-point series by eight goals to four. In the final, Toronto beat Detroit in the first three games, lost the next three, and won the clincher by the score of 2-1 at Detroit.

Trucks, trailers now subject to $5 fee

VICTORIA (CP)—A section of an act setting up the new department of commercial transport was proclaimed by the cabinet Tuesday, making all new commercial vehicle and trailer registrations subject to a $5 registration fee.

The new department is headed by Labor Minister Wicks.

Superintendent of motor vehicles George Lindsay said instructions to collect the new fees have already been sent to licence issuing offices.

Vehicles already registered will not be affected.

The new department will eventually have sweeping powers over the growing trucking industry.
