Conservation car shows free educational films

Interesting and educational films are being shown every night in the Forestry Conservation Car which is at present beside the Canadian National Railways Station in Prince Rupert.

This car arrived in the city Tuesday on the fourth week of a B.C. tour from Prince George to Prince Rupert. The films are sponsored by the Canadian Forestry Association, a non-profit, non-political organization, and the railway car is donated by the CNR.

Other undertakings of this organization are the training of junior wardens, the publicizing of Smokey the Bear and the promoting of Forest Conservation Week.

The hour and one half long films, shown by David Campbell of Vancouver, show the habits and haunts of forest wildlife. One film, called "Spatsezi," meaning "land of the mad goat," illustrates the northland 200 miles north of here and has been of particular interest to people along the line, Mr. Campbell said.

Other films show the promotion of conservation and natural renewable resources, besides the wise use of forest waters wildlife and soil.

Children's films and cartoons are being shown at all the schools during the car's four-day visit, and different films are shown at night right in the railway car.

There are two sittings each night—at 7 p.m. and at 8:30. Mr. Campbell said that the people viewing the pictures seem to enjoy them so much more, sitting in the railway car seats than in an ordinary theatre.

Also on display in the car are charts of wildlife, a wood sample board, and a conservation chart, showing the advantages of good conservation and the poor land produced by poor conservation.

The car comes to the city once every two years.

Santagrams bring messages to kiddies

A new service which has been especially designated for children has been inaugurated recently by the Canadian National Telecommunications service.

Called a "Santagram," the multi-colored telegram blank will bear messages of good cheer directly to children from Santa Claus himself at the North Pole.

The Santagram can be ordered anytime, with a specified delivery date stated. There is a large variety of stock messages that senders can choose from or they can make up their own. They all bear Santas signature at the bottom.

This is a novel way to send children a happy message and may be delivered anytime right up to Christmas Eve.
