The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 NT	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♥

Today we have another case of theft to report. Declarer literally stole his contract by using an old psychological strategem to discourage an attack against his weakest suit.

The hand was selected from a recent tournament and the bidding usually followed the sequence given here. Against the four spade contract, West opened the jack of hearts and the queen went to East's ace. A heart came back and most declarers took the discard of a club and won the trick in dummy. The king of spades was led at once and went to West's ace. The club shift was now obvious and East picked up two tricks in that suit to defeat the contract.

A few declarers postponed the discard at trick two and ruffed East's heart return. However, when West got in with the ace of trumps he invariably shifted to a club and the outcome was the same.

It is quite apparent that on the merits of the hand there is no way to fulfill the contract except against the most inane defense. But one declarer hit upon a way to steal the hand by capitalizing on the gullibility of West.

When East won the opening lead and returned a heart, this declarer discarded a diamond instead of a club. The play merely amounted to a postponement of the eventual club sluffs but it conveyed strong psychological implications to the defense that South's weakness was in diamonds.

Whether it should have done so is another matter, but at any rate when West was in with the ace of trumps he shifted to a diamond. South took this in his own hand, drew trumps and discarded two clubs on the dummy's long diamonds to make his contract.

Realists needed for Peace Corps

MONTREAL (CP) — Canada's newly-formed peace corps is no place for starry-eyed idealists, says Dr. John S. Conway, history professor at the University of British Columbia.

Dr. Conway is UBC committee member for the Canadian University Service Overseas (CUSO), a non-governmental group patterned after President Kennedy's United States Peace Corps and designed to help under-developed countries through the trained services of young Canadian volunteers.

In an interview, Dr. Conway said the peace corps volunteer needed "a quality of sacrifice for a lifetime identical with that of a missionary on the ecclesiastical scene." He must be well-trained and prepared to contribute his ability — not for a year or two — but until the job is done.

Queen Elizabeth difficult in wax

VICTORIA (CP) — Controversy over a wax figure of Queen Elizabeth in a wax museum here should come to an end with the unveiling Saturday of an improved image. After eight attempts to create a good likeness, Josephine Tussaud Limited says they have solved their difficulties in catching the Queen's personality.

Make good coolers

VANCOUVER (CP) — The head of the city civil defence shelter program says it's possible people are using the underground shelters as fruit coolers. Said Group Captain A. E. McNab: "We had a farmer in the other day who was interested in using one for a root cellar." Good air circulation and relatively even temperatures make the cellars ideal for storing fruit, he added.
