Garden Club speakers pleased with gardens

A visiting garden expert was agreeably surprised at the abundance and color of the well-kept gardens of Prince Rupert. He was E. M. King, horticultural specialist of the department of agriculture at Kelowna and was one of the guest speakers at the well-attended meeting of the Garden Club held Friday night at the Civic Centre.

Mr. King was particularly impressed with the beauty of the hanging baskets placed along Third Avenue by the club and he considered them a great asset to the city. He expressed surprise at noting tender species of rhododendrons and azelias in bloom. Also noted were the picturesque dwarfed pine trees along the highway.

Mr. King showed slides of new species of flowers and plants which he suggested the members try to grow in the gardens here.

Another guest speaker, J. A. Pelter, district agriculturist from Smithers explained briefly the work and function of the Smithers experimental station. He mentioned specifically that their work is mainly research as applied to the economical production of agriculture and farm management. This department has many services available to gardeners such as soil sampling, insect problems, and weed control.

A lengthy question and answer period followed in which both speakers discussed many problems facing local gardeners.

President Cornelius Varhaar thanked the guests and assured them their visit and information had been of great benefit to the gardeners here. The president announced that requirements for entries for the flower show to be held August 25 and 26 will be published in the Daily News shortly.

Lynn Roberts feted at shower

Bride-elect Miss Lynn Roberts was the guest of honor at a miscellaneous shower held last Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Neil Stromdahl, 707 Fourth Avenue East. Mrs. Douglas Payne was co-hostess.

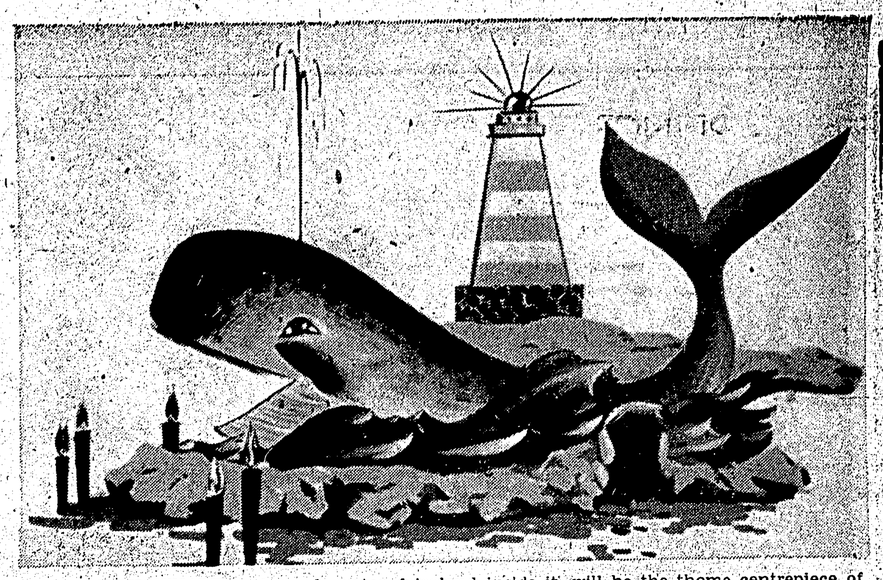
Miss Roberts will become the bride of Gerald Cameron on August 16.

Seated in a decorated chair, the honored guest opened the numerous gifts which were presented to her in a gay umbrella. An added novelty was a tin of spice attached to each present. Miss Maureen Krog, here from Vancouver to attend the wedding, assisted in opening the gifts.

The guests compiled a bride's book and games were won by Mrs. James Hadden, Mrs. Charles Roberts, mother of the bride-elect and Miss Krog.

Other guests were: Mrs. Alfred Ritchie, Mrs. William Hardy, Mrs. Reginald Linton, Mrs. Paul Lopushinsky, Mrs. Gordon Cameron and Mrs. Emil Blain.

Ingenuity is required when friends drop in for a visit and you're caught with an empty cookie jar and cake tin. Here's a delightfully simple way of solving the problem. Serve Sugar-and-Spice Slices that can be prepared in next to no time from ingredients at hand. Combine one-quarter cup of margarine or butter with one-third cup of white sugar, one-half teaspoon of cinnamon, one tablespoon of orange juice and two teaspoons of orange rind. Spread each slice of a loaf of bread with about two teaspoons of the mixture. Stack the loaf in a greased, shallow pan or bread pan. Tie a string loosely around the stack lengthwise. Spread the remaining mixture over the top. Slice lengthwise, cutting completely through the centre of the loaf. Bake in a moderately hot oven, preheated to four hundred degrees F. until th topping is bubbly.



A MAMMOTH WHALE with underwater fairyland inside it, will be the theme centrepiece of the Pacific National Exhibition's Marine Festival August 19 to September 4. The giant "walk-through" will be 40 feet high and 80 feet long. It will feature lifelike rolling eyes, and spout water 50 feet in the air.

Hot rolls right off the grill sounds very tempting to almost everyone. The next time you plan a barbecue, include rolls on the menu. Heat them in one of two easy ways. You can place them in a coffee can, cover the can with its own cover or foil, and place the can on its side on the grill. Roll the can occasionally until all the rolls are heated. You can also place the rolls in a large skillet, sprinkle them lightly with water, then cover the skillet with foil and heat. Give the pan a shake now and then to help the rolls along. When they're piping hot, serve them with lots of butter or margarine.

TRAVELLING CLINIC DUE AUGUST 25

Children's Hospital here for first time

Prince Rupert will have a visit from the Children's Hospital travelling clinic for the first time on Friday, August 25.

It will be set up in the Skeena Health Unit, 333 Fifth Street.

There will be a pediatrician, an orthopaedist, an ophthalmologist (eye man) and three nurses from Children's Hospital medical staff in attendance. It will start at 9 a.m.

All patients seen at the clinic must be referred by their family doctors through the health unit concerned.

Children's Hospital travelling clinics touch 18 different centres during the year. This child specialist service has grown from an original four Okanagan towns 12 years ago, to its present province-encircling tour. During 1960 a total of 1,689 patients visited the combined clinics. Number of patients seen in the Skeena District that year was 274. Terrace had 116, Smithers, 62 and Kitimat, 96.

Children's Hospital March of Dimes drive sponsored each November in Prince Rupert by BPO Elks No. 342, is largely responsible for funds needed to bring these clinics to the children in this area who need their services.

A survey of 135 Japanese girls born and raised in the United States showed they averaged 1.6 inches taller than girls in Japan.

Many travellers use highway

Highway 16 between Terrace and Prince Rupert was a busy stretch of pavement all weekend. Like ants on parade, cars streamed in both directions constantly.

Every parking space and picnic site was crowded with tourists and residents alike, who were out to enjoy the heat of the sun which poured down from cloudless skies, and the superb, matchless scenery of the Skeena River and valley.

The moss-mottled mountains, some still crowned with snow, border the river and highway. Wild flowers grow in abundance, and — rare in this land — the foliage and bushes are shriveled in the heat and dust.

The people of Terrace and vicinity tell of no rain for three months, and of parched gardens and dried-up creeks and rivers.

Many people were sitting on beaches and sandbars fishing for salmon. Also on the lookout for fish as they swam in the treacherous waters of the Skeena were many large seals. Cars stopped along the highway, as their occupants enjoyed watching the bobbing black heads of these voracious fishers.

The largest campsite of this stretch is at Exchamsiks River. This stretches for half a mile along the highway, near the spot where the Exchamsiks flows into the Skeena. Here are all possible facilities placed for the convenience and comforts of campers and picknickers by the B.C. Forest Service.

The campsite is on a large sandbar by the river which is narrow at this part. Magnificent mountains rise on the opposite side of the river. This campsite is 64 miles from Prince Rupert and 34 miles from Terrace and is between Salvus and Exstew.

Here, the tourist may set up camp, and catch a salmon or trout in the slow-flowing river while his children play safely on the beach. Tourists may cook the meal on the handy grill with wood supplied by the forest service.

Evidently, visitors are finding this a perfect spot, for an inspection of the registration book reveals such addresses as Vernon, Strawberan, Maine, Fort St. John, B.C., St. John, N.B., Calgary, Alta., and even Queensland, Australia.

55th anniversary marked by couple

A pioneer couple, Mr. and Mrs Peter Kelly, well-known in this city and area, celebated their 55th wedding anniversary last Friday in Nanaimo.

Mr. and Mrs. Kelly were married August 11, 1906 at the Methodist Church at Port Essington, with a reception at Cunningham's Hotel.

Mr. Kelly, now 76, is minister of the United Churches at Parksville and Errington on Vancouver Island. Mrs. Kelly is the daughter of Mrs. Amos Russ of Skidegate, who is now 105 years old.

The Kellys have five sons and one daughter: Jimmy in Oakland, Ted at Ocean Falls, Harvey in San Francisco, Horace in Prince Rupert, and Reg, who is in northern Alberta. Daughter Agnes is in Tacoma.

There are 11 grandchildren.

Mr. Kelly was former missionary skipper on the Thomas Crosby and is a recognized spokesman for the Indian people of Western Canada.
