Moslems killed, building burned as Secret Army renews attacks

Truce lifted as talks collapse

CP from AP-Reuters

ALGIERS—The Secret Army struck again today as promised, returning to its terror campaign by mowing down Moslems and setting fire to Algiers University.

Three phosphorus bombs shattered the inside of the massive science and medicine building as the Secret Army carried its "scorched earth campaign" into the heart of the city, striking at the principal seat of learning in Algeria.

Firemen gave up hope of saving the main building as flames roared out of the large windows. Black smoke shrouded the heart of Algiers.

Earlier today, European terrorists struck at groups of Moslems with pistol and machine - gun attacks, killing four. Two post offices were robbed.

HIT TERRORISTS

Ten Secret Army men in paratroop uniforms Wednesday night set fire to the accounts departments of a post office. They also planted two plastic charges.

In the western city of Oran, never affected by the truce, police announced that seven Secret Army men were killed and five captured Wednesday. Troops backed by armor sealed off the centre of the city while police searched house-to-house for a clandestine radio.

The renewed terrorism followed the lifting of week-long truce Tuesday midnight, which marked the apparent collapse of efforts to reach a reconciliation between the Secret Army, which violently opposes Algerian independence, and the Moslem - led executive ruling Algeria until the July 1 self-determination referendum.

REACH IMPASSE

The Secret Army announced the ending of the week - old truce in a pirate radio broadcast.

The announcer, who identified himself as the high command spokesman, said negotiations between representatives of the Moslem and European communities had reached an impasse.

"We are again taking up war — particularly in the economic field," the announcer said.

He advised women, children and older Europeans to leave Algeria to "free the men for the scorched earth policy."

Socred Madley verbally attacks Conservative, NDP candidates

Special to The Daily News

TERRACE—Skeena Social Credit candidate Lewis Madley last night verbally attacked both of the other two candidates in the June 18 federal election, but in the style of many other politicians didn't actually name them.

Speaking at a meeting here, Mr. Madley termed Tory candidate A. D. Vance as a "ground hog" and described certain NDP statements as being "sheer popycock."

Mr. Madley said there is just a little more than a week left to campaign "and the public has yet to see the Conservative candidate hold a public meeting where he was a featured speaker."

"What will he use if elected to Ottawa, a sword of silence. When is this Tory ground hog going to come out and face the light of public scrutiny."

Referring to a recent report in The Daily News, Mr. Madley said "the NDP candidate's statement about accepting "each one of the invitations even though it meant cancellation" is sheer popycock."

"What about the meetings which were being arranged by the Chambers of Commerce in Smithers and Hazelton? Were these towns too small for the member's ego. Or is he trying to play down the surge to Social Credit that is evident in the east end of the riding.

"Why is the once mighty member reluctant to share a platform with a Social Credit candidate, even though the Tory will not be there."

All-candidate meetings, sponsored by the Junior Chamber of Commrece were planned for Terrace June 13, Kitimat June 14 and Prince Rupert June 15.

Mr. Howard told a meeting in Stewart Monday that all-candidate meetings should be cancelled because "the Tories have refused to come out to these meetings and subject their record to the light of day."

Yesterday Mr. Vance told a meeting of the Conservative party executive and party supporters that he had no intention of not appearing at the all-party meeting in Kitimat June 14, "even if it means a two-candidate meeting."

Mr. Vance turned down the invitations to speak in the other two meetings because of previous commitments.

Mr. Hadley also told the meeting that "our role in international affairs should be to make Canada an effective leader among the democratic nations."

"Under a Social Credit government our policies and examples would make a real contribution to international peace and goodwill.

"We would strike out as a positive force for mutual peace and democracy, extend Canada's responsible role in the western hemisphere through participating in the Organization of American States and support firmly, Canada's NATO allies."

Pearson criticizes Canada's devalued dollar

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The devalued Canadian dollar got another going over on the election hustings Wednesday night.

Lester B. Pearson said it's "nonsense" to say no money was lost in the attempt to avoid devaluation of the dollar, the exchange rate of which was pegged May 3 at 92½ U.S. cents.

The Liberal leader, speaking at Strathroy, Ont., had been accused by Prime Minister Diefenbaker Tuesday night of "smearing" Canada's financial integrity by suggesting there had been a "mysterious" $62,000,000 in international help since May 3 to support the dollar.

Mr. Pearson said he accepts Mr. Diefenbaker's statement that there had been no outside help. But the $62,000,000 was still a puzzling item.

"The certain fact is that the exchange fund received special support in May to the extent of 62,000,000 U.S. dollars," he said.

SPEARS ABOUT UNITY

Mr. Diefenbaker had said Tuesday night the $62,000,000 represented "purely routine" transactions—U.S. payments for defence and other purchases in Canada, and other exchange settlements.

A national flag and Canadian anthem engaged Mr. Diefenbaker's attention Wednesday. At Roberval, Que., Mr. Diefenbaker said national unity cannot exist unless there is general acceptance of these "symbols of our sovereignty" in all provinces. Later, at Chicoutimi, he said a true national spirit cannot be developed by legislation alone.

Leaders of the New Democratic and Social Credit parties dealt with the health insurance issue, on which they are poles apart.

NDP chieftain T. C. Douglas said it is a "burning social need in Canada" and accused the Progressive Conservatives of siding with the Canadian Medical Association in opposition to it.

Social Credit Leader Robert N. Thompson said the "true issue" of the election is being fought in Saskatchewan, where the provincial government and doctors are at loggerheads over a provincial health plan scheduled to start July 1.

"The people of Saskatchewan are helping to determine whether Canada will sink even farther into planned welfare economy or decide on a policy of individual enterprise and buoyant economic growth," he said at Minnedosa, Man.

Prince Rupert has now gone 90 days without a fatal traffic accident and 411 days without a fire fatality.
