Opening lead: Three of ♥

In every community there is a group of players who are constantly on the alert for opportunities to impress a naive partner or a gullible opponent. Not infrequently their end is achieved by some spectacular discard of a winning trick. But aside from showmanship, disposing of a king or even an ace may at times be indispensable to success.

South in today's hand came up with a discard which was as effective as it was dramatic. South's opening bid of one no trump with two doubletons was perhaps a little irregular but it did have certain compensating features. North made a mild effort to play at a suit contract, but South went on in no trump. North, surrounded by queens, had no qualms about accepting the no trump contract.

West opened the three of hearts which was taken in the closed hand. Since the spade suit must provide the bulk of the tricks, declarer went to work on it immediately by leading the queen for a finesse. All hands ducked and he continued with the six of spades. When West covered with the ten, declarer paused to reflect.

If West's original holding were the K-10-5, he would surely have covered the queen when it was led. It therefore appeared that East had the king of spades and was merely holding off in an attempt to disrupt declarer's communication with the dummy.

South accordingly went up with the ace of spades and when the king failed to drop he continued with the deuce of spades. As East won this trick declarer let go the king of hearts from his hand, establishing dummy's queen as the master card in that suit. No matter which suit East returned it would establish an eventual entry to dummy, for declarer had merely to let the lead ride around to the queen. A heart return would give South nine tricks, and either a diamond or club shift would permit him to take 11.
