Legion calls meeting on vocational school

The Royal Canadian Legion Branch 22 will hold a meeting sometime in March at the Legion auditorium to discuss plans to establish a vocational training school in this area.

An earlier meeting, scheduled for March 23 has been cancelled.

A committee was set up by the Prince Rupert Legion in October to investigate the feasibility of establishing a vocational school in this area. The findings of the committee firmly established the dire need for a school of this kind, a Legion spokesman said.

He said a venture of this type must have the support of the community to achieve success.

"All clubs and groups have been requested to tend a delegation to this meeting.

The Canadian Legion would appreciate notification from all groups expecting to attend the meeting.

Pair fined for not paying parking tickets

Two city men were fined $5 each plus $2.50 costs by Magistrate E. T. Applewhaite Saturday morning when they appeared in police court charged with failing to pay a parking ticket.
