Opening lead: Ten of ♥.

Where a slam contract is involved, more than a merely casual analysis is indicated when the campaign of play is being set up. South, the declarer, started out to employ reasonable caution in today's hand, but then, when success was well within his grasp, he made one tiny slip that led to disaster.

The bidding was sound and, when the dummy was spread, declarer could see that his six spade bid was an eminently reasonable commitment. West's opening lead of the ten of hearts was covered by East's queen and taken in the closed hand with the ace. South cautiously tested the trump suit first by cashing two rounds of spades, East discarding a club on the second round.

Trumps were temporarily abandoned and attention was shifted to the side suits. Rather than risk everything on a successful diamond finesse, declarer decided to cash out his high hearts first in order to determine how many sluffs could be obtained. When both the king and jack of hearts went thru, he was able to throw two diamonds from the dummy.

A diamond was led to the ace next, and dummy's remaining diamond was returned to the king in the closed hand. The stage was now set for declarer to rid himself of the troublesome jack of diamonds, and he quickly led that card in order to ruff with the dummy's jack of spades. Unfortunately for him, West chose this moment to discard his singleton king of clubs and, when declarer tried to return to his hand by leading a club to the ace, West ruffed in. Another club had to be conceded, and the contract was set down by one trick.

Declarer's haste in ruffing out his losing diamond is an understandable error, but it seems unfortunate in light of his cautious play up to that point. All he had to do was put down the ace of clubs first, and then trump the jack of diamonds. A club is now conceded to the opponents and South has nothing but high trumps left.
