Miss Joan Eyre wed in First United rites

A quiet wedding ceremony at the First United Church June 9 united in marriage Joan Elizabeth Eyre, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Eyre of 1060 Third Avenue East and Leslie Thomas Polhill, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Polhill of 218 Eleventh Avenue East.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an organdy over satin ballerina-length dress with a fitted lace bodice and three-quarter length sleeves. She wore long white gloves and carried a corsage of red and white carnations and baby chrysanthemums.

The matron of honor was Mrs. Gerald Rochon. Her ballerina dress was of blue organdy over satin and her corsage was yellow carnations.

Walter Buzzie, cousin of the groom, was best man and Walter Perkins was the usher. Rev. Dr. R. W. K. Elliott officiated at the ceremony.

A wedding breakfast was held at the Venetian Room at La Gondola Cafe. White candles flanked the three-tiered wedding cake on the head table.

Emil Quast proposed a toast to the bride and Ronald Eby read the congratulatory telegrams.

For a wedding trip to the interior by car, the bride wore a light green suit with beige accessories.

They will live at No. 6 Seaview Apartments, on their return. The groom is employed at the Canadian Government elevator.

Schools grow

GRAVENHURST, Ont. (CP) — Dorothy Shaw, retired school teacher who was a high school principal here 22 years ago, noted some changes at a ceremony in her honor. When Miss Shaw started there were 139 students and four teachers; now it's 450 students and 16 teachers.

In Sheffield, England, it was the bride's extra-long train that caused havoc. First the groom tripped over it, spraining an ankle. Then the officiating clergyman got tangled in it and fell, suffering a painful back injury. When the best man tripped, banging his head against the altar, the enraged father of the bride produced a pair of scissors and clipped off the offending train. —Toronto Star.

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — A painting display here featured works by amateur artists more than 70 years of age; none of the exhibitors had received any instruction until they had reached this age. One woman, 78, exhibited 13 pictures.

CWL to meet at Whitehorse

Diocesan CWL presidents from Kamloops, Nelson, Prince Rupert, Vancouver, Victoria and Whitehorse will be voting delegates.

Second World War city resident now chaplain at Shaughnessy

A Canadian Army "padre" who was stationed in the city during the Second World War is now chaplain at Shaughnessy military hospital in Vancouver.

Major, the Rev. Roy Durnford, arrived back in Vancouver from Ste. Anne de Bellevue, Que., where he was chaplain at the military hospital. He arrived back at the west coast just in time to help with the consecration of the new colors presented to the Seaforth Highland Regiment on June 3 by Prince Philip.

Padre Durnford earned the DSO with Seaforths during World War Two, and gained fame by herding a large group of German prisoners, under fire, armed with only a swagger stick.

After his retirement from the active Army, Padre Durnford was assistant to the Dean of Christ Church Cathedral in Vancouver, and then went to Ste. Anne de Bellevue, Que.

While stationed in Prince Rupert, he organized concerts and parties for the troops before there was a Young Men's Christian Association established here.

The other Protestant chaplain at Shaughnessy was Dr. George Turpin, who retired June 30, after 15 years service there.

Dr. Turpin has been in British Columbia since 1914, and has had United Church pastorates in most sections of the province before and after ordination. He is one of the few ministers who served in both Great Wars.

In the First World War, he joined the 54th Kootenay Battalion and served with field ambulance and hospital units. In the Second World War, he served with the Canadian Scottish, the Westminster Regiment and went overseas with 5 Casualty Clearing Station.

His successor at the military hospital is Rev. Walter Little of St. Paul's and St. Matthew United, South Burnaby.

A DELICIOUS DISH FOR A RAINY SUMMER DAY . . . in fact, good all year 'round! . . . piping hot German Kraut made with the best-tasting sauerkraut I know . . . LIBBY'S SAUERKRAUT. Here's how:

German Kraut

1 28-oz. can Libby's Sauerkraut, 2 tbsps. bacon fat or butter, 2 cups boiling water, 1 tbsp. caraway seeds, 1 large potato. Place sauerkraut, water, bacon fat and caraway seeds in saucepan. Boil rapidly until most of the water is evaporated. Peel and grate potato and add to sauerkraut. Cover and simmer gently until potato is cooked. 6 servings.

Easy to cook, wonderfully versatile, Libby's Sauerkraut is low in cost and high in appetite appeal . . . no wonder 9 out of 10 cans of sauerkraut sold in Canada come from Libby's modern kitchens!

EVEN ON THE HOTTEST 'DOG DAYS' of summer, you'll feel much less like 'barking' after the soothing luxury of a CALGON BOUQUET bath, an inexpensive luxury, I might add! You see, Calgon Bouquet is the delightful bath powder that makes your bath-water silky-soft . . . and both water and soap rinse away cleanly . . . no sticky feeling . . . no bathtub 'ring'. So take my tip . . . when the heat threatens to get you down, do try the morale-booster of a bath scented and conditioned with Calgon Bouquet. You'll feel fresh-as-a-daisy and you'll look that way, too.

Tabasco important seasoning in making salad dressings

By LOUISE MOORE
Telegram Food Editor

Romans — hide your wives — Caesar's coming. That's the warning issued when Caesar crossed the Rubicon on his way to Rome. But it will be the husbands who will be forced into hiding if they turn down a Caesar salad, the noblest salad of them all.

Caesar hadn't a thing to do with it either. In a little restaurant down in Tia Juana, Mexico, it was first prepared by the Cardini family when the larder held little other than these salad ingredients to do for a meal when a number of guests unexpectedly appeared. So popular it became that it is now served in their swish new restaurant in Mexico City.

TABASCO FLAVORING

An important seasoning in many salad dressings is tabasco and you'll find it essential in this salad. The true pepper flavor is derived from tiny red peppers that have been aged like grapes for wine and is combined with oil, lemon juice, salt and dry mustard, a perfect dressing for crisp green leaves of lettuce and romaine which have been sprinkled with grated cheese. A raw egg and croutons are added last and then the salad is tossed and served.

TABASCO CAESAR SALAD

Heat 2 tblsp. salad oil in skillet with 1 minced clove of garlic. Add 2 cups bread cubes and heat until delicately browned. Remove the cubes and set aside.

Tear 1 large head of crisp chilled romaine and 1 large head of lettuce into bite size pieces. Toss them into a large salad bowl.

Sprinkle with ½ cup grated Parmesan cheese and ¼ cup crumbled blue cheese. Combine ½ cup salad oil, ¼ cup lemon juice, ¼ tsp. Tabasco sauce, ¾ tsp. salt, ¼ cup dry mustard. Shake to blend.

Pour over salad greens and toss lightly. Break a raw egg or better still have it coddled 1 minute and break it over the top of the greens.

Toss lightly until every particle of egg disappears. Add croutons. Enough to serve 6 to 8.

Another salad that's tops in summer time is this one which is very popular with the men who like to prepare salads.

SPRING GREENS

Break up enough greens to make 2 or 3 quarts — depending on number to be served. Add watercress and make sure all is crisp and cold. Put into large salad bowl with 1 small can well drained anchovies cut into small pieces.

Toss with a dressing made of ¾ cup olive oil, ¼ cup vinegar with tarragon or use half wine vinegar and half tarragon. Then add 1 tsp. dry mustard, 1 tsp. sugar, 1 tsp. salt, 1 tsp. paprika. Mix well before adding to the salad greens. Toss lightly and sprinkle with a few more anchovies chopped.

Stamp needed to honor Shakespeare

By WALLACE REYBURN
Toronto Telegram News Service

LONDON—With the 400th anniversary of Shakespear's birth coming up in 1964 it would be an obvious thing to do for Britain to bring out a commemorative stamp.

The Shakespeare Anniversary Council have in fact put it up to the Postmaster-General that a special issue be brought out with Shakespeare's head on it but there is no certainty that such a stamp will come into being.

Rock-like, the Postmaster-General has adhered to the policy of having none other than the sovereign's head on the stamps and, strangely, it is left to other countries to give Britain's notables a philatelistic boost.

Hungary has already done Shakespeare—plus Byron and Robert Louis Stevenson. The Russians have done Burns, Bernard Shaw, Fielding, Darwin and Blake (the poet, not the spy). The Greeks have used Byron and in 1958 Ecuador issued a Darwin stamp.

The last time heavy pressure was put on the Postmaster-General to recognize one of the Greats of Britain was in 1959 when the Burns Commemoration Committee tried to get Rabbie onto a stamp to mark the 200th anniversary of his birth. And at that time one of the snags of depicting men on British stamps was mentioned by the P.M.G.

Since the country is unique in not having its name on its stamps, the monarch's head serves as a symbol of nationality.

Water flowers added attraction

Every garden regardless of size can have some type of water garden, be it only a small galvanized tub sunk into the ground with a few flat stones and plants.

Drainage and running water are not really necessary for a small pool. It can be readily filled with the hose and drained by syphoning.

Water lilies are of course most popular for the water garden and almost any color except blue can be found among the hardy types.

Tropical water lilies are best treated as annuals and should not be set out until the water in the pool is at least 70 degrees, usually any time soon after the first week in June.

A pool should never be overplanted for much of its charm is in the viewer being able to see the water.

Managing editor south for rest

Editor and general manager of The Daily News J. R. Ayres, Mrs. Ayres and their daughter Barbara, left the city by car Sunday for Victoria. Mr. Ayres has been ordered by his doctors to take a two-month rest and is not expected back until after Labor Day.

In his absence advertising manager Howard E. MacGregor will be in charge of the business end of The Daily News while news editor Gary Oakes will be in complete charge of the editorial end.
