PICKLE PROOF
BARNSLEY, England (AP) — The pathetic plight of pickle packers was solved by a deodorant firm. Young girls working at a pickle factory here couldn't get rid of the smell of onions after work, and unkind jokes were hurled at them while the boy friends stayed away.

Forest crews receive awards for safety

Two British Columbia Forest Service construction crews received B.C. Safety Council awards Thursday for completing more than 95,000 man hours of accident-free work on projects in the Kispiox area.

The awards were made by L. F. Swannell, assistant chief forester. Crew superintendents Hugh Turner and Robert Murray received the awards on behalf of the crews.

A silver certificate was awarded to the crew of project No. 4656 for completing 61,340 accident-free hours, and a bronze certificate went to project No. 5431 for working 32,070 hours without a time loss.

The crews have been working on the Kispiox Road, 40 miles north of Hazelton.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	2 ♦	5 ♦	Pass
7 ♦	Double	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♠

A freak distribution in a hand taken from the International Pair event held recently in Cannes, France, played havoc with the plans of some of the contestants. The United States entry of Hampton Hume of Atlanta, Ga., and Mark Hodges, Boise, Ida., achieved the best North-South result when they bid and made a grand slam in diamonds.

Mr. Hodges, seated North, passed as the dealer, and East opened with an artificial demand bid of two diamonds. In the methods employed by this partnership, the two diamond call requests the immediate showing of aces. In other words, if West has the ace of spades, he is expected to respond with two spades. If he has the ace of diamonds, he would bid three diamonds. Once the question of controls was settled, East expected to be in a better position to gauge his side's offensive potential.

Mr. Hume who held the South cards suspected that the distribution was highly unbalanced all around the table and in an effort to block his opponents' channels of investigation, he leaped to five diamonds. West, having no controls to identify, passed, and now it was Mr. Hodges' turn to act. Having a good fit with South's preëmptive bid, but no defensive strength, he felt that it was highly likely the opponents could score a slam in hearts and, furthermore, that they would reach it if given the opportunity. He decided therefore to put East to the maximum guess by jumping directly to seven diamonds.

East found that his artificial opening bid had placed him in the rather unique position of never having mentioned his suit with the bidding now at the seven level. Since he was certain his side was off a spade trick, he was obliged to double seven diamonds in an effort to collect some compensation from the enemy.

Possibly the most wretched victim on the hand was West who had to guess which suit to open. As the reader can see, with either a club or a heart lead, declarer is set one trick. West actually chose to open the jack of spades and, with this unfortunate gesture, he donated the contract to the declarer. Mr. Hume permitted the lead to ride around to his king observing the fall of East's nine of spades. He then cashed the ace as East showed out, and it was now routine to lead the eight of spades for a finesse against West's ten and subsequently enter dummy with a trump to discard the losing club on the queen of spades.
