THRILLING LOVE STORY OF VIENNA

Spectacular is the Picture Compelling the Plot in "The Merry-go-Round

The week end offering at the Westholme commencing to-morrow night is The Merry-go-Round and story of gayest Vienna.

The atmosphere of the picture is so well handled that the spectator will swear that he was at the Viennese Coney Island. It has the advantage of a straightforward and authentic story and while the tale of the love of the count for a little organ grinder at the amusement park is quite simple, it is discreet and touching, and you get a genuine feeling that it all might really happen, even to the incident of the girl who took a champagne bath in a hugh wine cup during the revel. Here's the way Dorothy Day criticized the picture in the New York Sunday Telegraph:

"The dashing Count Maxamillian von Hohenegg is first introduced to the audience in his boudoir. His valet produces a large box of roses, the gift of a feminine admirer. Then we are shown the pampered count enjoying his breakfast which is served to him in his bath. Naturally these goings on prejudice us against the fellow, but he turns out to be as fine an Austrian nobleman as you can imagine.

Love Entanglements

"He is engaged to marry a woman of noble rank, and the Emperor Franz Joseph has practically requested that the marriage take place.

"Then the scene shifts to the Prater. The count meets a little organ grinder girl in the merry-go-round. She is loved. Her hunchback lover frequents the grounds and protects her from the cruelty of the supervisor and owner of the place. This boy, marvelously played by George Hackathorne, later sets his pet orang-outang loose to devour the cruel proprietor—a scene, by the way, which is beautifully done.

"The count loves the girl, but for diplomatic reasons he is forced to marry the other woman. When the girl finds out about it she is heartbroken. And all the time the merry-go-round goes on and on. Then comes the war. The count goes away and the girl becomes engaged to the hunchback. She hears of the man's death and, just as she is preparing to marry the boy, the count returns. The old love flares up and the girl, on learning that the count's wife is dead, forgets about her poor hunchback lover and finds herself in the strong arms of the count.

Characters

George Hackathorne gives a beatuiful portrayal of the role of the hunchback. When he is shown alone in one of the final scenes sobbing as if his heart would break you almost wish the count had been killed on the battlefield so that the girl would have married the boy.

"Norman Kerry as the count gives a fine performance. He must be six foot two if he is an inch, and will make many a flapper sorry that the Austrian nobility is no longer what it used to be. As the girl, Mary Philbin is appealing and ever so pretty.

George Seigmann is the proprietor of the merry-go-round. He is wicked and cruel, and is so convincing in his role that we were glad when the orang-outang ate him up! Dorothy

Wallace is regal as the counless and the rest of the cast is effective in every way.

"Merry-Go-Round" signifies the idle side of life. After each tragedy in the picture a merry-go-round is shown being turned by a relentless-looking figure (doubtless designed to be symbolic of Fate—we think we recognized him as one of the four horsemen).

Commental

"An interesting picture, well presented and acted, with a real Continental atmosphere, sums it all up.

"Details of interiors and costumes have also been given careful attention and anyone who can find fault with these backgrounds and details would doubtless pick flaws in the art of Yvette Guilbert or Mme. Duse."

MRS. PANKHURST IS FEARFUL FOR GIRLS

Former Suffragette Leader Decries Modern Tendencies Which Are Harmful

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 8.—Once a foremost apostle of women's freedom, leader of a famous suffragette band whose motto was "Deeds Not Words," Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst today is not so sure this freedom has been a good thing for women, for men, or for the world. Not that she has altered one whit about the vote, which she wanted because she recognized that through it might be righted inequalities and insecurities from which her sex suffers. But she decries the modern tendencies which she believes harmful to the youth of the world, and particularly of the American continent. She sees much that is bad in co-education, under comparatively lax supervision, and she thinks the "freedom" of the youth of today a danger from which the youth of tomorrow will suffer.

Mrs .Pankhurst is touring Eastern Ontario for the Canadian Council of Social Hygiene, in company with Miss Estelle Hewson, Ontario secretary, and Mrs. R. A. Kennedy, of Ottawa, a volunteer worker. In company with them she has also toured North Ontario in the same interests.

"If co-education is to be good it must be under the strictest supervision, and even at that I don't know how anyone could hope to supervise modern youth," said Mrs. Pankhurst, who by no means looks at the world through blue spectacles. "I am bound to confess I think separate colleges for men and women, as in England, are the better plan. Co-education should be proper if all the students were at school with studious intent. But they are not. They want to have a good time—and it is not always a healthy good time. They read appalling books, and young men and women discuss frankly what in other days women scarcely discussed with women or men with men.
