"PIONEER TRAILS"

A stirring melodrama of the camp settlements of California. A photoplay full of action, daring and courage through which runs a sweet romance. Virtue versus villainy in which the latter takes the count. Thrilling battles with hordes of redskins; dashing rescue from a runaway coach and an exciting trial episode are among the many big scenes of this spectacular picture, to which has also been added a strong comedy relief.

Excellent cast—Cullen Landis, Alice Calhoun, Bertram Grasby, Otis Harlan, W. J. Dyer, Virginia True Boardman and many others.

RUSSIA NOT AN EXAMPLE

Labor Minister J. H. Thomas Said Would Fight to Prevent That Democracy

LONDON, Aug. 8.—(Canadian Press)—J. H. Thomas, secretary of state for the colonies, speaking at a banquet at the Guildhall, York, recently said the Labor government of Great Britain was being criticized in some quarters because it was not sufficiently class conscious. In other words, the Macdonald government had refused to act on theories and were prepared to face facts.

Mr. Thomas made no apology for the government. The government, he said, had killed for all time the bogy of Labor's unfitness to govern, they had demonstrated that men in the humblest of circumstances could do as well as other people. They had also demonstrated that the people could have a Labor government in this country without seriously interfering with the stability or confidence in the country.

Of course, he and his colleagues of the ministry had not given them the moon. Of course they had broken some pledges. It was very easy to say the government should recognize Russia. From the day he took office he had said he would recognize Russia. Every member of the government was in the same position. They not only wanted to recognize Russia, but they wanted that country to be part of the community of nations. But let them make no mistake. If they said to him they were going to hold Russia up as an example for democracy of this country, then he was going to fight to prevent anything of that kind coming into this country.

The power of the railwaymen and all other trade unions would be a great and magnificent power if they used it wisely and well, Mr. Thomas said. Their power carried with it responsibility, and he begged them not to lose sight of that fact. That was the intelligent way to bring about reforms in Great Britain.

BACTERIA CHANGED BY LOCAL CONDITIONS

Professor Reed Tells British Association Regarding Minute Forms of Life

TORONTO, Aug. 8.—Bacteria are even more sensitive to changes in their diet than are human beings, it was shown by Prof. G. B. Reed, of Queen's University, Kingston, Ontario, in a paper to the Physiology Section of the British Association to-day. He found that bacteria are affected very radically in their size, shape and structure by variations in the amounts of salt and acid which are present in the solutions in which they are grown. For each bacterium there is one strength of salt and size are normal. When the acid or salt is increased beyond or reduced below this most suitable concentration, not only is the rate of growth slower, but the shape of the organism changes to a more or less marked degree. It becomes larger or smaller, is deformed, is less resistant to strengths of acids other than that in which it is accustomed and generally evinces the behavior, only to a much more marked extent, of an animal or man living in an unfavorable environment, or upon an unsuited diet.

LIVES OF INDIANS WAS REGULATED BY THEIR RELIGIONS

TORONTO, Aug. 8.—That the religions of the ancient tribes who roamed America centuries ago differed but little from practices still prevalent was pointed out by Ruth Benedict in the Anthropology section of the British Association today. "The will of the Manitou was made known to the tribe by visions, fore runners of the modern spiritualistic seances. Through this means he communicated to his followers taboos, immunities, privileges and even songs. Most of the life of the tribe was regulated in this way, including their ceremonies of initiation, the choice of their rulers, clan organization, hunting and warfare. Conclusions as to the relation of religious practices to other ceremonies were drawn by the speaker.

VISIT OF SQUADRON LEADER MACLAREN TO CITY SEEMS LIKELY

Thiepval to Call for Coal and Supplies After Long Absence From British Territory

It is considered altogether likely that C.G.S. Thiepval, now on the way down the coast from the Aleutian Islands with Squadron Leader MacLaren and the British round the world flight party aboard, will call at Prince Rupert making her first stop at a Canadian port in the past five months during which time she has been in the Far North making preparations for the flyers. The vessel will probably have to coal by the time she gets this far and she may pick up some supplies that have arrived for the flyers against their getting this far by the air.

It is announced in Vancouver that the Thiepval will be met by the local planes engaged in fisheries patrol service and that Squadron Leader Godfrey, in command in Vancouver, will meet the vessel outside of the harbor there.
