SHARKS ARE SEEN NEAR ENGLISH SHORE

Octopus off South Coast and the Sting Ray Annoying to Bathers

LONDON, Aug. 21.—The recent report that blue sharks were encountered near Hull need not cause any alarm amongst holiday makers, says a correspondent of the Daily News. No less than 16 different varieties of sharks have been seen at various times round the British coasts, but their appearance is very rare.

Smaller than sharks are the many types of dogfish. They are fairly common round our shores and are well known to fishermen owing to the nets they destroy. The sea scorpion, too, is fairly common on the northerly coasts of England and Scotland, but usually retreats when surprised by a swimmer.

More terrifying still, with its prominent, beadlike eyes, is the octopus, which is occasionally seen off the south coast.

Fortunate it is that most of these fishes, as well as the giant eagle ray and the sting ray, are seldom found within a few yards of the shore.

All holiday-makers are familiar with the jellyfish, which abounds on nearly every seashore in the country. But few bathers know that some of these pretty inconsequential - looking fish can inflict a painful sting. Jellyfish should not be confused with the beautiful sea anemones.

EFFORT BEING MADE REMOVE SACRED STONE

Scottish People Still Trying to Secure Stone of Destiny From Westminster Abbey

LONDON, Aug. 21. — David Kirkwood, M.P., has done more than express the opinion that the Stone of Destiny, in Westminster Abbey, ought to be restored to Scotland; he has now introduced a bill into the House of Commons for the removal of the Stone. It has been in the Abbey for but thirty years. The King is willing to give it up, but the people of London decline to let it go. History is repeating itself after six hundred years. There is not the remotest chance that the bill will go through, but London has already held indignation meetings over the bare idea.

The Stone was brought to Ireland by the Princess Tamar Tephi, daughter of King Zedekiah (from whom King George is descended) in the year 583 B.C. She married the King of Ulster, and their descendants were crowned on the Stone until Fergus the Great took it to Scotland in 485 A.D.

According to the British Israel World Federation, Westminster Abbey holds in this block of sandstone the actual "Throne of David."

LANDS ON ICE CAKE

HAMBURG, Germany, Aug. 21—President Ebert has awarded the medal for bravery to air pilot Max Tuxen, of this city for an extraordinary air feat. Last January Tuxen made a perilous landing on an ice cake in the North Sea on which was a stoker who had been left as a watchman on a wrecked motorship. The man was half starved and had given up hope of rescue.

To meet the increasing demand the makers of Nemo Corsets now offer to Canadian women—a PERFECT rubber-type garment —designed to promote correct and healthful reduction—

Nemolastik

(THE GUARANTEED)

Rubber Reducing Girdle

Months of intensive study and experiment were required to perfect and produce *NEMOLASTIK—the patented fabric used in the construction of the NEMOLASTIK Guaranteed Rubber Reducing Girdle. NEMOLASTIK is made from pure gum rubber, specially processed and covered on both sides with lustrous milanese silk of a delicate peach shade. This pliable and gently massaging fabric promotes figure reduction in a healthful way, whether worn next to the skin, or over an undergarment.

TEN REASONS WHY THE NEMOLASTIK GIRDLE DESERVES YOUR CONSIDERATION

1. It is guaranteed not to rip or tear.
2. It helps to make the figure permanently smaller and lighter in weight.
3. No rubber comes in contact with the body or undergarments.
4. It moulds the figure into graceful lines.
5. It is adjustable to the decreasing size of the figure.
6. It gives comfortable and gratifying support.
7. It can be washed with pure soap and water.
8. It doesn't chafe the skin or cause irritations.
9. It doesn't bulge over the abdomen.
10. It has no disagreeable odor to cause embarrassment.

The NEMOLASTIK Guaranteed Rubber Reducing Girdle is of the closed back, step-in or pull-over type; made with four garters, in a delightful lustrous peach shade. Sizes for all figures.

*Letters Patent Pending for Garment and Material.

CATHEDRAL IS DEDICATED IN ANCIENT FORM

Many Dignataries of English Church Present to Take Part in Ceremony

FIRST SINCE REFORMATION

LONDON, Aug. 21.—In the presence of the King and Queen, and of representatives of the Anglican Communion and indeed of well-nigh every Christian communion spread all over the world, Liverpool Cathedral has been consecrated and "set apart from all profane and unhallowed uses." When completed (only the central portion has yet been built) the Cathedral will rank in size and general impressiveness next to the Cathedrals of St. Peter's at Rome and of Seville. The consecration of this first portion took place twenty years to the day after King Edward laid the foundation stone. Thirteen years ago the magnificent Lady Chapel was completed, and has since served as the pro-cathedral of the diocese. At the ceremony recently there attended nearly every dignitary of the Church of England in this country, including the Archbishops of Canterbury and York, the Primus of the Episcopal Church of Scotland, the Greek Archimandrite, the Primate of all Canada, the Archbishop of Algoma, and bishops from America, from Asia and from India.

500 Years Back

For the Order of Consecration it had been necessary to examine records extending for at least five hundred years back, for Liverpool is the first cathedral ever to be built in England from the foundation since the Reformation.

The King and Queen occupied seats of carved oak near to the throne of the Archbishop of Canterbury. There were twelve stages in the service. First the bishop of the diocese, Dr. David, attired in plain clothes, went to various parts of the building and exhorted the congregation to prepare themselves for the solemn ceremony of consecration. Later a thunderous knocking was heard at the Great West Door. It was again the Bishop, and upon his third knocking the door was opened, and he was handed the keys of the building. Kneeling alone in the aisle, he remained while a procession of clergy passed to the choir. The Bishop then rose, and taking his crozier, made the sign of Alpha and Omega, on a part of the pavement which had been sprinkled with charcoal dust. Unattended, the Bishop, with the keys in his hand, paced the length of the nave and choir to the High Altar, upon which he deposited the keys. The solemn words of consecration followed. Other ceremonies followed, including the Act of Witness. Laying his hand upon the pilllar of the south sacrarium the Bishop made his mark of consecration, and directed the Clerk of Works to instruct the Master Craftsman to cut into the pillar the sign of the Cross encircled by the symbol of eternity.

Signed and Sealed

There followed the signing of the Deed of Consecration. Clerks with quill pens, with a ladle for the seal and with sand for the drying of the signatures, brought them to a table in a central space. The first to sign was the Bishop of the diocese. Then the King and Queen signed, and after their Majesties, the Archbishops, the Earl of Derby and other prominent citizens of Liverpool who are at the head of the building committee. The pronouncement by the Bishop followed: "We do now declare to be consecrate and for ever set apart from all profane and common uses this House of God."

Liverpool citizens of all ranks and of every faith made common rejoicing over the presence of the King and Queen, and over the consummation of this sacred enterprise. At the civic welcome in St. George's Hall the King said in part:

King's Address

"The building of the noble Cathedral is a fine tribute to the piety, the generosity and the local patriotism of the city and diocese, that on the twentieth anniversary of the day when my dear father laid the foundation stone, this great and splendid achievement of architecture is ready for consecreation and use. The hope you have expressed that this Cathedral Church of Christ in Liverpool may be worthy of the historic Cathedrals of England will assuredly be realised. Liverpool has risen to the full height of its rare opportunity and has placed itself on a level with those great merchant towns of the Middle Ages which found the highest expression of their religious aspirations and of their civic pride in the building and adorning of their cathedral church."
