VISUALIZES RADIO FUTURE

Television Screens on Public Vehicles May Bring Entertainment for Passengers

LONDON, Feb. 18.—Television screens in public vehicles, so that one could watch a cup-tie while riding in a bus; control of traffic by wireless; radio-guided freight aeroplanes carrying mail Overseas. There are some of the possibilities of the future envisaged by Robert R. Peccrini, staff superintendent of the London General Omnibus Company, in a paper on "Some applications of radio to the science of transport," read to the Institute of Transport at the Electrical Engineers' Institution in London.

Mr. Peccrini said that an inductive or wireless system of non-contact type of train control was to be considered by a committee set up by the Ministry of Transport.

Turning to road transport, Mr. Peccrini said that the institution of a species of indication board at an omnibus headquarters, coupled with a local radio, transmitter whereby the passing of omnibuses on certain services could be returned immediately to the relay system actuating the indicators, had been considered. Any marked irregularity in the service would call down the intervention of a flying squad in a few minutes.

"A television screen on a public service vehicle would not be so objectionable as a loud speaker, nor so unhygeinic as pairs of earphones,' he said. "To watch the concluding stages of a cup-tie match while riding home from the office would be a pleasant means of passing the time."

It was a practicable proposition to instal traffic control towers wherein the "Stop" and "Go" signals or colored lights could be radio triggered off from any reasonable distance, Mr. Peccrini said. "Manless ships, aeroplanes and motor-cars are accomplished facts and one can visualise radio-controlled freight aeroplanes carrying mails overseas in a very few years from now," he concluded.

SOCIETY FOR SAFE MOTORING

Only Those Who Have Driven 10,000 Miles in Three Years Eligible for it

LONDON, Feb. 18.—Solely for motorists a new Order of the Road was formed here recently. It has for its object encouragement to skilful drivers so that the roads may be safer for all users, and only those who are proved careful, capable, considerate, courteous and experienced drivers may become members. To become a member a man must prove that he has been driving for three years; that he has driven a minimum of 10,000 miles in that time; that he has had no serious accident for which he was held responsible; and that he has not been convicted on any serious police charge. Purely speed offences will not count against him, for there is no desire to bring about any slowing down of traffic.

The committee include the Earl of Cottenham, a racing motorist, Sir Arthur Stanley, chairman of the Royal Automobile Club—(though the R.A.C. has no connection with the order), Lieut.-Col. J. T. O. Moore-Brabazon, M.P., formerly under secretary to the ministry of transport, and K. Lee Guinness, the racing motorist.

Hon. W. H. Sutherland Defends Action of Government in the Legislature

MAKES A COMPARISON

Roads Which Cost $2.60 a Yard to Gravel in 1916 Now Cost 95c a Yard

VICTORIA, Feb. 13.—Declaring that he objected to statements of half truth but was not worried when all the facts were revealed, Hon. W. H. Sutherland answered criticisms of his department in the budget debate Friday.

Mr. Sutherland said the Government was going slowly in acquiring new roadmaking machinery because it would displace many men who were settlers and who depended upon roadwork for most of their present incomes.

Answering criticisms, Dr. Sutherland said the gravelling of roads in Esquimalt in 1916 under the Conservatives cost $2.60 a yard while today the cost was 95 cents.

W. A. Mackenzie of Similkameen said he regretted that the Government appeared apathetic in regard to the coal industry.
