CHRISTIANS IN SZECHWAN ARE BAITED

AGITATORS INVADE CHURCH AND TRY TO STAMPEDE THOSE TAKING PART

How a Chinese Christian congregation carried on unruffled while anti-Christian interrupters pasted inflammatory placaards around the room and tore up hymn sheets is the story told in a letter from a Canadian missionary who is at work in the interior province of Szechwan, near the borders of Tibet. The playing of an orphanage band and the singing of Christian hymns by hundreds of children at the service are believed to have stirred up the agitators.

The following is an eyewitness' account of the incident at Tzeliusting, Szechwan, where the Chinese church folk had rude interrupters. Rev. W. J. Mortimore, of London, Ontario, secretary-treasurer of the West China Mission of The United Church, writes:

"Mr. Bell and I arrived on the 24th and found that the Girls' Middle School had just closed their entertainment without interruption. The Womans' School had also had theirs, although certain anti-Christian demonstrators had pounded on the street gate. They yelled out, "Down with Christianity," and "Down with the running dogs of Imperialism," but could not get in.

"In view of the possibility of a disturbance at the public Christmas service in the church, the local leaders took the precaution to notify the military headquarters and received assurances that they would send men, if needed. The service began earlier than usual in the hope of avoiding disturbance from outside, such as occurred last Christmas. Everything went beautifully for a time.

"Mr. Siao, who was to lead in prayer; Mr. Lin, the preacher; Pastor Li, chairman of the district; Mr. Gerald S. Bell, of Toronto, and myself; Dr. Fuh, of the mission hospital, who was in charge of the whole service, and also Mr. Chen, classics teacher in the boys' school—all were on the platform. The preacher gave a brief but thoughtful Christmas sermon. Interspersed were songs by the different schools, boys and girls, and a band selection by the orphanage boys. It looked as if the program was going through without a hitch.

TROUBLE MAKERS FILTER IN

"Into the audience, however, there had been gradually filtering a number of agitators. At first they said nothing, but in the midst of Mr. Chen's address, a number of young fellows came in wtih long streamers of paper which they proceeded to paste up at the back of the church. Having covered the back wall, they came toward the front and put up more on the brick pillars.

"They finally started in with paste pot and inflammatory notices on the wall behind the platform where we were sitting. No opposition was offered and Mr. Chen kept on with his address until one of the leading demonstrators jumped on the platform and delivered a long tirade against the Church, Christianity and Imperialism, claiming, as these people always do, that Christianity is taught to drug the people and thus enable foreign nations to come in and dominate the country and exploit the people economically and culturally. It was the same with the announcements they had put up, calling on everyone to "destroy Christianity."

"The presiding chairman, Dr. Fuh, and Mr. Chen stood where they were and let this young chap rant away. He was followed by others. Their intention was, evidently, to break up the gathering. But the big congregation of boys and girls and older people looked quietly on as if it were an amusing entertainment and could not be drawn out.

"For fear that these agitators, foiled, would attempt something more drastic, word was sent over to the General and in a few minutes a dozen or so soldiers, armed, quietly filed in and took seats near the front. Their officer, when he deemed enough talking had been done, advised that the meeting be dismissed. He stated that he and his man had come not to support either one or the other side; but to preserve the peace and now, as both sides had had an opportunity of proclaiming their beliefs, it was time to close the meeting.

SANG DOXOLOGY AT CLOSE

"After some further efforts of the demonstrators to get the audience to follow them in various yells, the chairman, Dr. Fuh, called on all to rise and close with the Doxology. The singing of our boys and girls was most hearty and clearly showed the agitators what little effect all their grandiloquent speeches had made. They were manifestly nettled, but were persuaded to leave. All the audience filed quietly out.

"It was certainly a great marvel to me how quiet and unruffled those little tots of girls remained despite all the rumpus. My own fear was that there might be a forceful attempt to break up the service, and the prospect of a stampede with all those hundreds of children was rather appalling.

"For a while it looked as if it might be wise if we foreigners withdrew, as our presence was perhaps more irritating than that of the Chinese Christians, but our leaders asked us to stay where we were, and so we did to the end. Our people showed a splendid spirit throughout. Even when one agitator, more daring than the others, picked up some hymn sheets on the platform and tore them up, the chairman, though on the brink of retaliating, as he afterwards told us, decided it was more Christian to be patient with the fellow.

"After the service, the orphanage boys marched out and their band played as usual. There was no appearance of being in the least frightened.

"Is Christianity firmly planted in this city of Tzeliutsing? I have no doubt about it."

WHAT I MIGHT HAVE BEEN

As Told to Harold C. Burr

By HAROLD LLOYD

"Boyhood ambitions usually are a ragbag of dreams and nightmares—mostly nightmares. Electrical engineers in their early teens invariably become newspaper reporters or hardware merchants. It falls to the lot of few youngsters eventually to blossom into the line of endeavor that attracted them in their youth.

* * * *

"Strangely, I always had one real ambition. I wanted a career on the stage. This thought apparently was inborn. I often have heard my mother say it was nurtured by her. She wanted to become an actress, and did play in amateur theatricals. But her folks were very religious and never would consent to her going on the professional stage. Maybe she did instill this longing in my heart.

* * * *

"I started when I was 3, and at 12, in the old Burwood Stock company in Omaha, I had my first real chance to demonstrate to myself and the world that the stage was perhaps my vocation. But at 17 grew too old for kid parts and was still too young for juveniles, so I did character work. And from that work in San Diego I entered the motion picture [illegible]

"Even so, I harboured sort of side-line ambitions. I might have become a magician or maybe a prize fighter, for both of those games held their fascination. About the time I was able to grasp what magic was, I used to practice it. Legerdermain was my pet.

* * * *

"When I reached the age where by selling newspapers and magazines I could pick up a few odd pennies, I used to slip off to hunt stories where they sold tricks of any description. I would buy them and after I'd mastered their intricacies entertain the neighborhood kids with magical performances. My dad said I was pretty good at it, too—but then you know what fathers are.

* * * *

"Like every youngster of 14 I had my sport idols. These were prominent boxers of that time—Joe Gans, Battling Nelson, Abe Attell and other leading luminaries of the squared circle.

"I was a very rugged youngster, and to let off steam I had to be doing something. So I turned to boxing. My career in this game, however, was short-lived. It was all right as long as I stayed in the gymnasium. But I waxed ambitious and thought I could win in one of the Colorado State amateur championship tournaments.

"We were living in Denver then, and unknown to my people I entered in the flyweight class. I'd worked my way up to the semi-finals when my mother heard about it. There were not going to be any cauliflowered Lloyds in our family, if she could prevent it. I may add, she did, and the last bell rang for me as a pugilist.

* * * *

"Not in the least heartbroken, I subsequently devoted all my time to the theatre, when I wasn't conducting newspaper routes. I've tried my hand at about everything around a playhouse—assistant prop boy, usher, candy butcher, electrician's helper. Well, just about everything that was to be done."

SECOND POWER UNIT AT DOCK

TO BE PLACED IN OPERATION TO RELIEVE LOAD UNDER YEAR'S ESTIMATES

The following financial statements covering the operation of two city utilities for the month of March were presented to the city council last night by J. J. Little, superintendent of utilities:

TELEPHONES

Estimated Revenue	$3,656.85
Expenditure	2,447.38
Surplus	1,209.47

ELECTRIC LIGHT

Estimated revenue	$12,710.63
Expenditure	11,114.62
Surplus	1,596.01

The superintendent also presented estimates for the year 1928 in which he anitcipated a surplus from the telephone department of $10,500 on a total estimated revenue of $45,000 and a surplus of $15,500 on electric lights from total revenue of $125,000. Capital expenditure on telephones, it was estimated, would be $6,000 and on the electric light system $15,000.

The capital expenditure of the electric light department will include the putting into operation of a second machine at the dry dock now that the [illegible] machine there as well as the plant at Shawatlans Lake are loaded to capacity. The council accepted a recommendation from the committee that tenders be called for three 833 k.v.a. 13,000 volt transformers as well as other equipment that will be needed in placing the second dry dock unit in operation.

GIRL STOWAWAYS ON UNITED STATES SHIPS

Put Ashore in Florida and Formal Inquiry to be made regarding it.

WASHINGTON, D.C., April 17.—Court of inquiry have been ordered as the result of the discovery of four girl stowaways on board vessels of the South Atlantic fleet. Naval authorities declared last night that they were informed only four girls were found, but a report from Key West said that four girls who were landed there and at St. Petersburg, Florida, told of another girl being put off the destroyer Billingsley.

Naval officers of long experience here could recall but one other stowaway case in the navy. It was a girl who completed a journey on board the battleship Arizona from New York to Panama in 1923. Twelve enlisted men received prison sentences as a result of that episode.

Secretary Wilbur declared last night that courts of inquiry have been ordered in the ports where the vessels put the girls ashore.

The Least Excitement Made Her Heart Palpitate and Flutter

Mrs. Ambrose Orser, Elginburg, Ont., writes:—"I suffered for some time with a bad heart which seemed to be controlled by my nerves. The least little excitement would cause it to flutter and palpitate, and at times I would have real bad spells. I suffered in this way for some time when, one day, I saw advertised, so decided to try them. I had only taken a few boxes when I noticed that I felt better, so I continued taking them and in a short time my heart felt entirely different.'

HALF BLOCK ON GREEN STREET TO BE PAVED

City Council Decides on Work Near Hospital Estimated to Cost $2,200

A recommendation from the Board of Works that Green Street from Fifth Avenue to the lane to the rear of the Prince Rupert General Hospital be macademized at an estimated cost of $2,200 was accepted by the city council last night.

Speaking to the recommendation, Ald. W. J. Greer stated that it had been originally proposed to pave through from Fifth to Fourth Avenue but, on account of the heavy grade, it was decided that it would suffice to go half way to the lane. The work was necessary in view of heavy traffic and the present dilapidated condition of the street.

WILL FREEZE HERRING ABOARD A MOTORSHIP

DONNA LANE SAILS FOR NORTHERN ALASKA TO SALT, CURE AND FREEZE

SEATTLE, April 17.—The first Alaska vessel equipped for freezing fish, the motorship Donna Lane, of the Utopian Fisheries, is en route for Prince William Sound. Owers explained that 50 tons of herring, for use by halibut fishermen as bait, will be frozen aboard the vessel daily.

The Donna Lane will operate in the Prince William Sound, Cook Inlet and Kodiak Island districts. Herring will be prepared in blocks of 50 pounds each.

The motorship has space for 2,000,000 pounds of frozen herring, and also is equipped as a saltery for mild curing herring. It has a capacity in this respect for 25 barrels a day with dry storage for 7,500 barrels of mild cured herring exclusive of cold storage space.
