Record Business At Louvre Sale

Salesladies have been busy at the Louvre on former occasions but this week's business has surpassed all records since the store was opened. From morning until closing time these last few days, there has been a steady stream of buyers thronging the store and the bell of the cash register kept up a steady tinkle.

The values at the Louvre of course is the one reason. And in this selling off event, never before have the Louvre been able to give such values. Their customers know it. Just visit the Louvre and see for yourself. It will pay you.

This sale will continue until the stock is gone. But don't wait until the end—come now while the choice is still good.—Advt.
