BLACKMAILING COP IS CAUGHT

Was in Habit of Levying Toll From Lovers Caught in Midnight Parkings

HAMILTON, Ont., Sept. 4:—The "lovers" lanes of Hamilton Mountain are once more "safe for democracy," and many prominent Hamiltonians, it is hinted, are breathing fervent sighs of relief that the secret of their midnight amours is not to be blazoned forth to the light of day.

Convicted of blackmailing couples whom he found parked in motor cars on the mountainside, John Hunt, former Barton Township constable, is under sentence of from three to six months in the provincial reformatory.

Which is well and good, declare those who say that Hunt extorted "hush money" from them; but better yet, is the fact that the contents of Hunt's little black book did not become public.

"Dynamite in Book"

For that little black book contained a list of names, of persons of both sexes, and of various social standing—the names, police suspect, of those from whom Hunt levied toll. In other words, as one officer phrased it:

"There's enough dynamite in that book to wreck a dozen Hamilton homes."

Some of those named in the book, interviewed by police, emphatically—almost too emphatically—denied that they had ever paid toll to Hunt, or had even been on the mountainside after dusk. Others admitted their presence there, but insisted their conduct had been the height of decorum, and refused to testify, for fear of the possible consequences to their reputations or their domiciles.

One motorist, however, finally succeeded in turning the tables on Hunt and in baiting a trap for him. While he and a girl friend were seated in their car, he declared, Hunt approached them, "flashed his badge and a pair of handcuffs and informed them they were under arrest and must spend the night in the police cells.

When the motorist pleaded for leniency, Hunt, he declares, suggested that he might be able to "settle" the case if the motorist paid a fine of $50 on the spot. The latter replied that he had not the money with him, but arranged to meet Hunt in the same spot the following night. He did so, but with him were the Hamilton police officers, to whom he had reported the occurrence.

Get This Fact Straight

WHAT you eat at breakfast determines the kind of day you will have. Lack of balance in essential food elements results in heavy, listless mornings that unfit you for work or play.

Eat Quick Quaker because it has the perfect balance. The oat contains 16% protein, which is more than any other cereal, and protein is needed to build tissue and stamina. Carbohydrates, 65%, for energy and heat. Minerals for blood and bone. Vitamin B to help assimilation. Enough roughage to make artificial laxatives unnecessary.

Only carefully selected oats go into Quick Quaker. The cream of the oat crop and the most expert milling give Quick Quaker a deliciousness that everybody relishes. It's a breakfast you never tire of.

Be sure to ask your grocer for Quick Quaker. Packages contain coupons with which you can secure silverware and other useful articles. Big, family package, wrapped and sealed.
