Important Alcan Step

Nechako Diversion Part Of World's Greatest Power Development

By DON OSBORNE

With the diversion of the Nechako River into a 25-foot wide and 1,500-foot long tunnel cut through the solid rock of a canyon wall the world's greatest potential electrical power site is now headed towards full-scale development.

The Kemano-Nechako power development, when completed, will supply the power for the Aluminum Company of Canada's $500,000,000 aluminum project now under construction at the deserted Indian village of Kitimat.

Recently a dynamite blast set off by Mannix Construction Company supervisor Curly Cristman opened up the diversion tunnel and moved the Nechako River out of its ancient bed. The river now flows through the canyon wall and leaves the river bottom exposed for construction men to go ahead with the job of "waterproofing" the bed and erecting the 200-foot dam which will bottle up the Nechako water system from its eastern outlet into the Fraser River.

The construction crews hope to have the dam at 86 percent of completion by this time next year, but the flooding of the 200,000 acres in the watershed will not begin until 1955.

When completed the dam will cause the water level to rise 171 feet forming a lake stretching 100 miles east and west.

At its eastern end the lake will be blocked from its natural release by the Nechako Canyon dam. At the western end it will have an outlet through a ten-mile long tunnel which will be built underneath a mountain range. This tunned, with a drop of 2,600 feet, will carry the water to the Kemano River where the power will be generated in four power houses and carried by a 48-mile transmission cable to the aluminum plant.

The Kemano-Nechako power site, which was finally decided upon after a million dollar survey, has been described as having the greatest power potential of any place in the world. It's potential power output under the present development is estimated at 1,640,000 horsepower. This is greater than the 1,250,000 horsepower digested by the world's largest aluminum production plant at Arvida, Quebec, which produces 400,000 tons of aluminum annually.

Last Call For Voters

Final chance to get on this year's voters' list is today after which the official list will be closed for another year. Thirty-three new registrations have been received but "this is still below the mark," believes City Clerk R. W. Long.

The city clerk's office remains open tonight from 7 to 9 p.m. to receive last-minute registrants. Last year's list totalled 2865 property owners, householders and licence-holders.

GRISLY REMINDERS

a wealthy French youth who gave his inherited fortune to the poor, moved to Egypt and became a saint. His bones were returned to the French village of Motte-au-Bois.

During the pestilence, ergot victims who visited St. Anthony's shrine got well. As a result the Order of St. Anthony was established. People went for the saint's blessing. At the same time they were fed with good, clean bread.

Not until the 18th century was the ergot puzzle solved and the sickness traced. The pestilences have been dying out, and where the sickness does break out, it is less severe because of better medical treatment. In many countries there are laws against permitting ergot rye to get into mills.

The little French outbreak mystifies the ergot experts.

"It could hardly be a farmer wanting to make money on bad rye," said Dr. Kenneth Ericson, an official of one of the leading ergot concerns of New ork. "The ergot was worth more than the grain if the farmer offered it for sale."

REMINISCENCES

diers—about half a centry ago, in South Africa. There was no chocolate in army rations in 1901—and it's our guess Mr. Eagle is the only old sweat left who delayed such a bleeding long time in eating his gift from the Queen.

KISSING TURNING MESSY

Franchot Tone of Hollywood spits in the face of a columnist. Sounds like confirmation of the report that the use of cuspidors in the States has been abolished.

Before this, many a central British Columbia ranch has been wiped out by fire with no insurance. That's a dead loss. Several more are about to be destroyed, this time by water, as the Alcan Co. floods the Nechako River region. Ranch owners protest against what they say is too small compensation. When someone has spent the most of his life changing a piece of B.C. wilderness into a home and a feeling of independence, he can be excused if he places no inconsiderable value on it. And in any settlement reached, we'd like to think Alcan is big enough not to forget this fact.
