NEWS OF THE MINES
AROUND PRINCE RUPERT

Rainbow Creek Not So Good—Consolidated Active on Manson Creek—Value of Aircraft in Mining

No claims were staked by the recent expedition led by Hon. W. C. Shelly into Rainbow Creek, Nation River. After investigation by two engineers, who went in with the party, it was considered that there was nothing to justify further expense. Some gold showings of doubtful commercial value were seen but nothing more than had been known for some years. Prospectors who rushed into the district would be disappointed, members of the Shelly party declared.

* * * *

While prospectors have been reported to be swarming into the Manson Creek area and mixed reports of their discoveries have been coming outside, officials of the provincial mines department are watching with interest the more comprehensive and scientific efforts of the Consolidated Mining & Smelting Co. to develop a placer property on Slade Creek. On this stream, a tributary of Manson Creek, extensive exploratory work, including diamond drilling, will be done by the Consolidated this summer, it is announced. W. M. Ogilvie, one of the company's most experienced engineers, has gone into that country to take charge of operations. After some preliminary work last year, he is enthusiastic as to prospects. Consolidated, holds a number of leases on Slade Creek where it is hoped to develop a large scale hydraulic proposition. Another syndicate, headed by R. C. McCorkell of Fort St. James, will endeavor to develop a similar prospect on Germanson Creek, another tributary of Manson Creek. The mines department regards the Manson Creek area as offering excellent prospects for valuable gold discoveries and as justifying systematic exploration. There is no discovery, however, that would justify a stampede.

* * * *

The value of aviation has been well illustrated in the recent stampede to the new placer gold property on Rainbow Creek in the Nation River country. The overland journey has been cut from three or four days to a few hours. It is self-evident that aircraft can be of great value in conquering the unsettled spaces, particularly in this district.

DEATH IS ACCIDENT

Inquiry Into Circumstances of Tragedy at Kumeleon Inlet Tuesday

Chenoski was struck by a donkey engine cable which slid over the top of a stump, catching him inside the angle. The young man had his neck and arm broken and is believed to have died instantly.

CHAMBER IS SYMPATHETIC

Local Businessmen's Organization Does Not Endorse Resolution In View of Situation

At its meeting last night, the chamber of commerce council decided not to endorse the request of the fishermen as expressed at their recent meeting, on account of the dispatches coming from Ottawa indicating that the matter had already been considered and rejected.

The chamber members expressed themselvs as bing strongly sympathetic with the request and desirous to take any action which might prove beneficial but, in view of the news published that day from the capital it would not be wise to take any action.
