ATTEMPT ON PRESIDENT

The world was shocked last night when it heard that an attempt was made to assassinate President-Elect Roosevelt. It was undoubtedly the work of a maniac and as such is most difficult to deal with. There is no insuring that there may not be other maniacs who would try again with greater success.

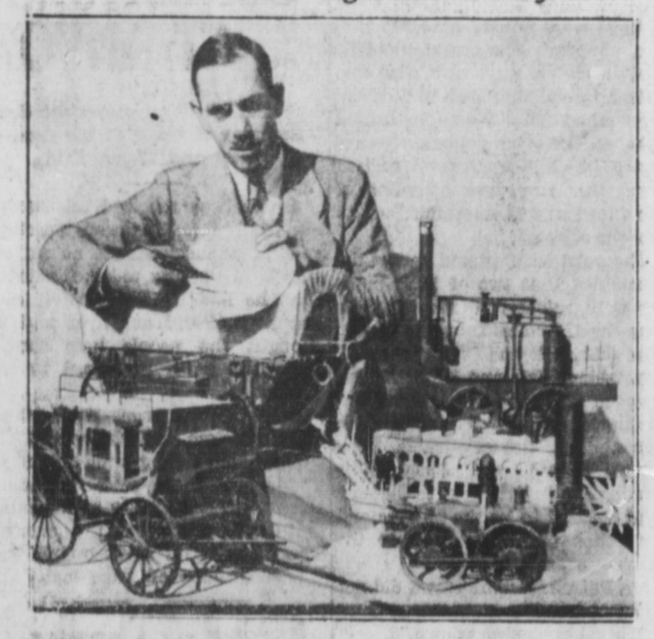
Canadians are almost as much interested as Americans in the president of that country. We are close neighbors and first cousins. All are glad to know that the murderous attack was unsuccessful so far as Mr. Roosevelt is concerned.

ENGLAND AND AUSTRALIA

Australia is said to be more like England than any other of the British Dominions. One of the ties that bind is the mutual interest in the game of cricket. Each year a team from one country visits the other and honors are pretty evenly divided. This year the English team won and will carry home the mythical ashes.

Canadians generally look upon cricket as too slow a game. They like baseball or lacrosse or ice hockey where there is more speed and the game is soon over. The country lacks people of leisure who can enjoy a three-day game.

Model Making His Hobby



Something of a cut up is P. Vedette of Hollywood. When not selling drygoods he's making steamboats, locomotives and stage coaches from old boxes.

FOR PITY'S SAKE

Editor, Daily News:—

Believe it or not, I dislike writing to the paper, but occasionally I see red, and the appeal now being made for old clothes for the needy does not improve my temper. Further in my capacity of secretary to the unemployed it is my duty to comment on this—otherwise I may lose the best job I ever had.

First, Mr. Bennett, Prime Minister, should be very, very angry at this unwarranted interference, seeing that he guaranteed that no one will lack food, shelter or clothing. Why not give Mr. Bennett a chance?

Second. There is no necessity for anybody wearing old clothes when new material is rotting in the warehouses.

The intentions of this gentleman are no doubt good, but does he ever stop to think that poverty and charity can be banished (like the King of Spain) by the united voice of the people. There is no room for either in this age of 100-fold abundance. The only way of salvation for gentlemen of this ilk is to discard their slop-chests and get behind the unemployed movement. There, he will learn that the Government Agent has instructions to issue clothing to necessitous cases.

I cannot understand why the greatest obstacle to human progress towards the millenium appears to be charitable institutions. The depression will never end by fiddling around like this.

W. A. HOGG,
Secretary, N.U.W.A.

POLICE TELL STORY OF TREATMENT RECEIVED FROM STRIKING MOB

stable McIndoe when he saw the crowd swarming down the road. When the men were stopped at the bridge they were shouting and one struck him a blow on the back of the head. A man got hold of him and shouted that he had got a policeman. Sandedo was among those who struck at him. Some tried to get his revolver from the holster but he prevented them with his arm. One tried to gouge out his eye and others kicked at him. Finally he fought his way through to the front and was taken to the hospital. Some of the crowd had taken his revolver and his baton and his clothes were useless. They had also tried to throw him over the bridge twice where the fall would have been fifty or sixty feet. Sanvedo deliberately kicked him and one man tried to jump on his head with hob nails but he warded it off with his arm. At the end one eye was partially open so he could still see.

Constable Roberts of Vancouver told of being hit on the head in the same melee. He showed a cut in his cap and there was a corresponding wound in his head. He was struck again as he tried to get up. All made a rush for him and tried to put him over the bridge but he got back and was being hit continuously by the mob. His revolver was taken while he was down and also his baton. He also lost his wrist watch. A revolver went off close to him while he was in the crowd.

Constable Harrison told of being caught between two bodies of the strikers near the bridge. One man made a pass at him with a club. Just then the crowd began to move so he followed down to the beach.

Mr. Patmore announced that he would reserve the defence evidence until the trial in the higher court.

TELLS OF CONDITIONS AT ANYOX

$2.75 and miners got $3.25. Wages were low now because the price of copper was low, much lower than the cost of production.

The rate paid mechanics such as carpenters and mechanics is not less than $4.00 a day. Mine shift bosses get $4.75 and mill and smelter shift bosses get $5.00 and more.

Speaking about living conditions, Mr. Maxwell said the cost of cabins and houses was from $8.00 to $15.00 a month and this rate included a reasonable amount of light, water and most of them have baths in their homes. Rooms for single men in bunkhouses cost from $1.00 to $5.00 a month. Hospital services cost single men a dollar and married men $2.00 for the whole family. For this they get hospitalization, doctor's service and medicines in all the major operations for which low fees are charged.

Asked in regard to a rumor that residents were not allowed to buy out of town, Mr. Maxwell said no restrictions had ever been made in this regard. As a matter of fact every mail brought truck loads of stuff from the mail order houses.

One thing they did not encourage and that was the running of boardinghouses by residents. The houses were not built or equipped for that purpose and the rents charged did not cover that sort of thing. Yet in a good many cases residents had a relative or friend boarding and no one worried about it.

In regard to the social activities, Mr. Maxwell said that the Community League were given concessions. They ran the theatre, the pool room and the store commissary at the mine and the profits went to further the activities of the league in providing library and reading room, sports, gymnasium and other facilities for the members.

On the whole Mr. Maxwell said he thought living conditions were excellent at Anyox.

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

The first left-handed pitcher in Big League baseball was said to have been Doctor John Lee Richmond of the Worcester National League Club? He shut out the Clevelands in the first no-hit, no-run, nobody-reaching-first-base game on record.

The English peer, Lord Lonsdale, under an assumed name once met and defeated John L. Sullivan in five rounds?

Walter Johnson, for many years identified with the Washington American League baseball club, holds the record for the number of games pitched by one chucker in the American League? He pitched a total of 802 games in that league.

Babe Ruth was first a catcher at St. Mary's Industrial School, and that later he took up pitching and hired out to outside teams at a dollar a game?

The famous race horse, Man-o-War, was never entered in a Kentucky Derby, the classic of American turf events?

That "Rube" Waddell, the eccentric genius of baseball pitchers, made the greatest number of strike outs on record in the American League. While pitching for the Athletics during 1904, the Rube struck out 336 men.

That boxing got its name from an old word which described a "box on the ears?"

Charles Daniels, a white-bearded gentleman of more than eighty years, who, when last heard of was living on a Connecticut farm, has the distinction of being the first umpire in the National League, many are the memories Daniels brings from the past.

Once, when Daniels was manager of the Hartford club, he sold Connie Mack and four other players to the Washington club for $3500.

Daniels once said that a salary of $1400 a year was good money for a players in those days!

DEPRESSION PLANT FAD IN TORONTO

TORONTO, Feb. 16:—The "depression plant," a new kind of flower that will grow while you look at it, has become the latest indoor sport at Toronto.

Cross-word puzzles had their day, bagatelle came next but the latter was as quickly dismissed by jig-saw puzzles. The "depression plant," however, threatens to make the jig-saws, or "jidders" as some people prefer to name them, move over and share the limelight.

There have been reports of aquariums which are springing to life when "sown" with a large clinker from the furnace, fertilized with table salt, and watered with liquid bluing. But the real authority of the art comes from Miss M. Annetts of the staff of the Physics department of the University of Toronto. She dismissed the subject by saying it is "nothing new," but if asked nicely will demonstrate.

The reporter of the Globe gives his account of the demonstration as follows: "She poured into a jar some water-glass, the solution used for preserving eggs. Then she added four times as much water and stirred up the mixture. 'Now watch,' said the physicist. She dropped in some colored crystals, the size of peas. In a few minutes they had reached the top of the jar, complete with leaves and flowers.

"'Aluminum chloride grows the fastest,' the scientist explained. She dropped in a piece of salt, and a white mushroom shot up. Ferric chloride formed a brown seaweed. Nickel chloride gave a green fern, and cobalt chloride produced blue stalks. Some different lacework sprang up when manganese sulphate was dropped in."

Although the current rage, the "depression plants" have been known for more than three centuries. Leduc, a French scientist, made them 40 feet high. They were shown to the French Academy in 1706. Osmotic pressure, which is a partial explanation for the rise of sap in trees is said to be responsible for the effect. At the growing tip of the "plant" there forms a skin of metallic silicate, which when it bursts, releases more solution, forms a new skin, and the building goes on.
