COMMON COURTESY

Those who have attended public meetings in Prince Rupert and elsewhere, especially in British Columbia, cannot but have noticed the lack of courtesy extended to the chairman and the rest of the gathering by a few people grabbing their hats and making for the door just as soon as the audience rises to sing the national anthem.

We pride ourselves on our freedom in all British countries and it is only by taking advantage of this freedom that people are enabled to act with such rang discourtesy to our king and country. It would not be tolerated in any other country. Imagine such a thing being done in Russia while the people were singing the Red Flag or whatever the national song is through which the people express themselves.

This is a British country, an integral part of the British Empire, and any who do not wish to remain in it are welcome to leave. Those who are citizens have taken an oath of loyalty to the king and then they show their disloyalty by an open display at public meetings. Many of those who act in the manner mentioned have come to Canada because they expected to better themselves. They are taking advantage of British tolerance and flouting the people who have made them welcome.

This is not a question of whether they believe the words of the national anthems which are sung. Nobody has to ask God to save the king or to believe that he is going to do so. That has nothing to do with the question at issue. What is plain to everyone is that the national anthem, as sung, is an expression of loyalty by all British people to the king and empire and as such everyone should stand at attention with head uncovered while it is being sung.

When Canadians go to the United States they stand at attention while the people sing "America" or some other national song. In France they do the same while the "Marsellaise" is being sung and similarly they pay respect to the head of the nation while they are in Japan, Russia, Italy or Germany. It is a matter of common courtesy to do so. So in Canada the chairman of any meeting should insist that any who are willing to stay during the main part of the proceedings should remain at the end and at least stand at attention with uncovered heads while the audience sings "O Canada" or "God Save the King."

Man in the Moon

Mud slinging seems to have been going on around the Empire office.

Jake says he finds the streets so busy it is difficult to get around.

Why all this fuss and bustle
Everybody seems to rustle
Fear of losing Christmas things
From their homes the people brings.
How I long for calm once more
Far from all this city roar
Think I'll go to some far town
Or some city of renown
Where once more I can repose
Take a nap or softly dose.

Only four weeks to Christmas. Then we shall have a wonderful time.

Jake says he has four bits saved up already toward the big celebration. He'll be quite rich if he does not spend any of it in the meantime.

BASKETBALL WAS CLOSE

Ladies', Intermediate and Junior Matches Particularly Even—Seniors Put Up Good Fight

Senior League—Grotto, 49; Kalens, 32.

Ladies' League—High School, 5; Comets, 7.

Intermediate League—Mrchants, 17; Warriors, 16.

Junior League—Scythians, 16; Boy Scouts, 14.

Hoop fans were treated to three close games and one not so close in the league basketball fixtures at the Moose Hall last night.

In the Junior League opener the Ssythians just nosed out the Boy Scouts by two points in a close game with the winners in doubt until the final whistle.

The Intermediate game between Merchants and Warriors proved to be the best of the evening with the two recruits, Arney and Kanawa, responsible for the Warriors losing, Kanaya sinking the winning basket just before the final whistle. Comadina and his crew were leading 9-8 at the interval. From then on it was a ding-dong battle, the winners being uncertain until full time.

The High School girls' luck was out when they lost to the Comets in a close exciting game by a score of 7-5. Steen and Smith starred for the winners and Brooksbank, Ritchie and Blaine led the losers' attack.

It was the Grotto's and Jumping Joe "Gilli's" night out when the Nicotine men took "Bullet Joe" Scott's Kalens into camp in a free scoring game, 49-32.

Gillies made his bow into senior company by turning the highest individual score this season. The first half was close with the Grotto leading 22-16 at half time and the Kalens having a chance to make their first win. After the rest period the Grotto turned on the steam and the game was never in doubt. Although the Kalens fought to the last minute they could not stop the Tobacconists.
