AT PRELIMINARY TRIAL SEVEN MEN ACCUSED

and they were undoubtedly out of control. There must have been five hundred men gathered at the Beach, some of whom wore helmets.

Constable Brunton told of conditions as he saw them that morning at the Beach. He heard Inspector Shirras speak to Joe Sarich and Kenneth Montgomery. Sarich said they were going to picket and prevent the men going to work.

The inspector told him it was not a lawful picket. There were too many present.

Shirras said they were going through to do the job. The police then stood aside and the men passed over the covered bridge. A number of the men carried clubs and some wore helmets. Sarich seemed to be one of the leaders. The miners were in control of the situation and nothing could be done. The crowd remained until about 8:20 and when they had gone he picked up some of the weapons which were produced in court.

The evidence of the employees of the company attested to the fact that there was a large crowd present and that they were out of hand. They were not allowed to pass through the crowd. Some of them were doing maintenance work but that did not count with the crowd.

James B. Murdock, plumber, told of seeing the men marching past his house from the Mine. Some of them carried sticks and some pieces of iron. There must have been four hundred in all, he thought. Some of the men were dressed in mining clothes and wore helmets and some wore just ordinary clothes.

Sun Life Comes Through Times With Increases

MONTREAL, Feb. 15—Four hundred and seventy-eight million dollars increase in assurances in force from the peak year 1929 to the end of 1932 is the achievement of the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada. This period internationally famous economists agree to have been the most severe business depression the world has known in the past hundred years, the downward movement being four times greater than any other in history. Statistical records reveal that general business activities declined 54% with over 30% of the working population without employment.

The globe-encircling Canadian Sun Life has been called upon to face adverse world business conditions to a far greater degree, during the past three years, than most Canadian financial institutions; but in spite of these troubled conditions it has maintained its position as a world company emerging with a sizable increase in assurances in force. This was made clear at the annual meeting here yesterday.

HULBERT PAYS OFF BIG DEBT

Hero of "Jack's The Boy," Wipes Out $60,000 Which He Undertook

LONDON, Feb. 15—Jack Hulbert, the English comedian, who made a big hit in the film "Sunshine Susie," and later scored a success in "Jack's The Boy," has won a signal triumph in wiping off an enormous debt, with which he was saddled about 18 months ago. It is a story with a happy ending, in keeping with Hulbert's happy roles in musical comedy films.

Jack Hulbert had been in partnership with Paul Murray, thatre manager, and the partnership was dissolved a year and a-half ago. At this time Hulbert undertook voluntarily to pay off debts amounting to approximately $60,000, and he accomplished his object before the end of January, 1933.

CANADA'S ANTHEM

Editor, Daily News:—

Please permit me to compliment you and the Daily News upon your editorial of Saturday the 11th in regard to "O Canada" and your publication of the words of Canada's anthem at the head of your editorial column.

Only in Vancouver and a few other places in British Columbia (including Prince Rupert) is any other version in common use but the one you are publishing. That is the Weir version. It is in the British Columbia school books. It is the version used in the Canada-wide proclamations in 1927 for the Diamond Jubilee of Confederation. In travels across Canada two years ago I heard "O Canada" sung in many Canadian audiences in many Canadian cities, but never any other version except in Vancouver and Prince Rupert. Any loyal Canadian will learn and sing these words and these only, the standardized version, the ones you are publishing in your paper. Please continue to do so.

Yours truly,
L. S. McGILL.

Literary Tribute To Lady Nicotine

Poets and Prose Writers Express Mankind's Debt to Good Tobacco

Since the day when Sir John Hawkins, Ralph Lane Governor of Virginia; Sir Francis Drake and Sir Walter Raleigh introduced and popularized smoking tobacco in England, tobacco has formed the inspiration of literary men and artists.

King JamesI., is said to have voiced early objection to smoking, refusing to permit his mouth to be "used as a chimney," but despite his royal prejudices, smoking became popular in England and, indeed, throughout Europe. Poets, prose writers and philosophers from the sixteenth century on have extolled its beneficience and acknowledged the comforting solace of the "blessed weed."

In modern days among those who have found a congenial theme in tobacco have been Sir James Barrie, the novelist and playwright, whose tender whimsicalities have made him a beloved figure in English letters wherever English is spoken and read. "My Lady Nicotine" will remain a classic of its kind.

Rudyard Kipling, the Poet of Empire, creator of "Kim" and "Soldiers Three," devoted several famous verses to the cigar:

"Open the old cigar box,
"Give me a Cuba stout,
For ways are running crossways,
"And Maggie and I are out.
"A million surplus Maggies
"Are willing to bear the yoke;
"And a woman is only a woman,
"But a good cigar is a smoke."

One of the most enthusiastic of modern eulogies on cigars comes from the mouth of a character in Thomas Mann's novel "The Magic Mountain."

"With a good cigar in his mouth a man is perfectly safe, nothing can touch him—literally. It's just like lying on the beach. When you lie on the beach, why you lie on the beach, don't you. You don't require anything else in the line of work or amusement, either."

P. R. Nichol, assistant tax collector for the C.N.R., who is here in connection with the court of revision that is being held today, arrived on the Prince Rupert this morning.

Costliest of All British Pictures Yet Produced

"Carnival," the photoplay to be shown at the Capitol tonight and tomorrow has the distinction of being the costliest motion picture ever produced in the British Empire. It can best be described as a happy combination of melody, drama, comedy and song, with the incomparable Matheson Lang heading a cast that includes such favorites as Joseph Schildkraut and Dorothy Bouchier.

Much of the play was filmed in Venice, the city of romance, and many of the scenes are in technicolor. Alfred Rode and his famous Gypsy Band provide lilting and tantalizing music for the carnival scenes.

"Carnival" is one of the real cinema achievements of the present season.
