Lectures Tell Why Fish Must be Kept First Class—Methods Of Preservation

In his lecture before fishermen on Friday night on the subject of fish preservation, Dr. Bedford of the scientific staff of the Prince Rupert Fisheries Experimental Station, referred to the changed conditions which governed the halibut fishery today as compared with several years ago. In those days there was less active competition with the Atlantic fish and other cheaper foods. Further it took longer today than it did formerly to obtain a good haul of halibut. It was now necessary to embrace new methods of ensuring that fish cargo was brought to port in first class condition. The better the condition of the fish when it reached port, the better it would stand up to long transport and long cold storage. There was the important factor of demand of consumer and, consequently, price. The fishermen, indeed, held the key to the situation. There was no doubt that losses were now being incurred due to careless handling aboard boats, much of which could be eliminated.

Factors in Preservation

The speaker discussed at considerable detail the preservation of fish aboard boats under the following headings:

The handling of the fish immediately after they are caught. (a) Length of time lying on deck; (b) Cleanliness aboard—absence of slime and blood where fish are gutted; (c) Blood left in poke and on skin; (d) Bruising and cutting through skin into flesh.

Cleanliness of hold (disinfection).

Amount of ice used.

Sources of heat in the hold.

Method of stowage and icing.

Tired, Below Par? Try This "Hospital-Tested" Remedy

If you knew that a remedy had been scientifically tested at a hospital on 40 patients, to prove its value in correcting run-down, always tired, below par conditions, and the results had been so good that they impressed the doctor in charge of the test, wouldn't you, too, be impressed?

Such a test was recently made on that famous preparation, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. At a leading Canadian hospital 40 students formed the test patients in a clinic to determine the exact amount these world-known Pills increased the heamoglobin and red blood corpuscles in the blood streams of tired out, nervously-exhausted people. (These two vital blood elements carry oxygen from the lungs and nutriment from the food to every cell in the body, and a lack of them is the cause of these run-down conditions).

In every case where the red corpuscles had been below normal at the start, there was a recorded increase after the treatment on Dr. Williams' Pink Pills—and in 95 per cent. of the cases the haemoglobin content had also improved. The patients had lost their tired-out feeling, had regained their pep and energy, and their general health was again normal.*

Are you needlessly putting up with that distressing "tired out" feeling that indicates a run-down condition? Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will benefit you as they benefitted these 40 scientifically-tested patients. This proven preparation will restore your energy, vigor and buoyant health, because it revitalizes your blood stream. You are taking no chances, as the hospital test shows. You are bound to feel stronger, revitalized and more vigorous as you take the treatment.

Start taking this proven blood-builder right away. It is equally good for children, "teen-age" girls, and adults. Your druggist has these Pills in stock—50c a package.

*Individual reports on these 40 patients, certified by the hospital pathologist, are on file.
