WHIFFLETS
From The Waterfront

Union steamer Catala, Capt James Findlay, arrived back in port at 2:15 this afternoon from Stewart, Anyox and other northern points and sailed half an hour later for Vancouver and waypoints.

Salmon prices continue at a good level at Ketchikan with quite heavy daily landings. According to quality and grade of fish, the prices range from as low as 4c per pound to as high as 16c. On Monday there was a drop from Sunday. Hecate Straits caught fish is commanding better prices than that caught locally. Halibut landings have been rather light at Ketchikan of late with only a few thousand pounds being in, the price being around 7c and 4c.

Two western schooners and six local boats marketed halibut catches at Seattle yesterday totalling 171,000 pounds as follows: Eldorado, 40,000 pounds, McCallum, 8¾c and 7½c; Northern, 40,000, Whiz, 8¾c and 7½c; President, 18,000, Whiz, 7⅝c and 6c; Irene J., 12,000, Sebastian, 7⅝c and 6c; Tillicum, 16,000, New England, 7½c and 6c; Antler, 15,000, San Juan 7⅜c and 6c; National, 18,000, Booth, 7¾c and 6c; Al Junior, 12,500, Washington, 7¾c and 6c. Ling cod was selling at 2c per pound at Seattle yesterday and red cod and sablefish at 5c.

C. N. R. steamer Prince John is now on the pontoons at the local dry dock for annual overhaul. She was lifted out of the water yesterday afternoon and will be undergoing cleaning and painting for the next week or so.

A new Waco seaplane of the Pacific Airways piloted by Claire Dobbin is here. Others on board are G. S. Andrews of Victoria, who is conducting photographic forestry survey work for the Forest Branch, and Jim Lightheart of Vancouver. The plane arrived Sunday evening from the south and is awaiting a clearing up of the weather before proceeding to Terrace. It took off yesterday afternoon but soon returned.

IS REALLY VERY FINE

A Special Word of Recommendation For "Victoria the Great" Now Showing Here

The very fine picture "Victoria the Great," now showing at the Capitol Theatre, cannot be allowed to pass without special mention and high recommendation for all to see.

Built up around the glamorous Victoria and Albert romance, finest of all royal love stories, "Victoria the Great" is also a refreshing historical record and, on that basis, has a special appeal. Famous incidents and figures—Melbourne, Peel, Palmerston, Gladstone, Disraeli—are portrayed with faithful exactitude.

The picture is artistically produced and tactfully presented. The culminating feature is a technicolor portrayal of the great Diamond Jubilee of 1897 when the beloved sovereign celebrated the sixtieth anniversary of her accession. Here are touching moments, bringing the picture to a close on a high note.

The cast is, of course, dominated by the famous British actress, Anna Neagle, in the title role. Anton Walbrook, as Albert, is also notable.—G. A. H.

SEES ALL TORY RANKS ANSWERING CALL

lowing year Sir Robert Borden was selected by the 81 Conservative members. Welding the party together, Sir Robert emerged victorious in the bitter 1911 campaign, fought with reciprocity as the main issue. He continued at the head of the union government through the Great War.

On his resignation from the leadership in 1920 he was succeeded by Mr. Meighen. From 1921 until 1925 Mr. Meighen led the opposition in the House and was called to form a cabinet a year later. His "shadow government," as it has been called by opponents, held office only three months. Defeated in the 1926 election, Mr. Meighen resigned his post at the head of the party. Hon. Hugh Guthrie acted as temporary leader for a few months until Mr. Bennett's election in 1927.

Recall 1927 Convention

The Winnipeg gathering was the largest and most representative political convention ever held in Canada. Approximately 2,500 delegates and alternates attended, representation being based upon rules set out by the national convention committee.

Mr. Bennett's election October 12 came as the climax of sessions lasting three days. On the second ballot he was given 780 votes, two more than was necessary to elect. The vote saw the defeat of Hon. Hugh Guthrie, C. H. Cahan, K.C., Hon. R. J. Manion, Hon. Robert Rogers and Sir Henry Drayton.

The return of the poll on the two ballots followed:

First ballot: Bennett, 594, Guthrie 345, Cahan 310, Manion 170, Rogers 114, Drayton 31.

Second ballot: Bennett 780, Guthrie 320, Cahan 266, Manion 148, Rogers 37, Drayton 3.

On announcement of the result of the second ballot election of Mr. Bennett was made unanimous on the motion of Mr. Guthrie supported by Mr. Cahan and Mr. Manion.

"No longer can the claims of my profession or my business be upon me," the former minister of finance said in his speech of acceptance. "These I must put behind me. You have determined for me that henceforth, so long as I have health and strength, I must dedicate my talents and my time, such qualities as I have, the fortune that God has been good enough to give me, to the interests of my country through the great party to which I am privileged to belong."

Speech Incident

While election of a new leader was the paramount object of the convention, the outstanding incident came on the opening day when Mr. Meighen and Hon. G. H. Ferguson, then premier of Ontario, clashed. Both leaders had considerable support in the convention although they had announced their determination not to seek the leadership.

Mr. Meighen defended his Hamilton speech made in 1925 on the eve of a by-election in Bagot, Que., a party storm following his declaration that if war again threatened, the people should be consulted at a general election before troops left Canadian shores.

He explained it had never been Canadian policy to maintain a military force capable of immediate participation in war and that an appeal to the country would not involve delay in preparing. There existed, he said, a justified apprehension that a strongly Conservative parliament might unhesitatingly plunge Canada into war.

Mr. Meighen pleaded for party unity. "The cords of memory unite us to the past and this is the time and place when all of us and the millions we represent should catch the spirit and hear the voice of the noble founders of our political faith," he said.

Mr. Ferguson declared he was not present to make an attack on anyone but to justify the position he had taken "two years ago in respect to a speech afterwards delivered at Hamilton." He said Mr. Meighen had conferred with him in Toronto with regard to the proposed speech.

"I ventured to suggest to Mr. Meighen that the opportunity for his proposed remarks at Hamilton was inappropriate and that his action was mostly inadvisable," he said between cheers and interruptions. He conluded his speech with an intimation that he would dissociate himself from activities of the new convention if it chose to endorse Mr. Meighen. No action was taken by the gathering with regard to Mr. Meighen's speech.

Adopted Resolutions

The convention adopted resolutions dealing with a score of public problems. Of special importance were those dealing with Imperial relations, the tariff and immigration. The delegates re-affirmed their loyalty to the crown "and to the maintenance of that integral connection of Canada with the British Empire which is based upon full concurrence of the Canadian people.

Adherence to fiscal policy of the Liberal-Conserative party was affirmed in the tariff motion and in connection with immigration the delegates favored an agressive system of immigration, the resolution including a recommendation for exclusion of Orientals.

Other resolutions adopted were in regard to legislation affecting ex-servicemen, a Pacific Coast outlet for the Peace River district completion of the Hudson's Bay Railway, natural resources of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the St. Lawrence waterway, old age pensions and the Canadian National Railways.

Delegates to the convention included Conservative members of the Senate and House of Commons unsuccessful Conservative candidates at Dominion elections and provincial leaders. There were also four delegates from each federal riding in addition to the member or defeated candidate and five alternates from each riding and "delegates at large" from each province in number equal to the number of seats for each province in the Dominion House.

Alternate delegates were seated in the convention but if the regular delegates were present the alternates had no vote. "Delegates at large" were elected by provincial Conservative associations.

Proceedings were presided over by Hon. Edgar N. Rhodes, premier of Nova Scotia and Senator Charles P. Beaubien, joint chairman.
