DAILY EDITION Tuesday, January 4, 1938.

STARTING YEAR RIGHT

Many visitors to Prince Rupert have told us that Prince Rupert is one of the most beautiful cities on the continent. Its location is unusual and the natural slopes and abrupt hillocks make it particularly suitable for beautification.

A beginning has already been made in developing attractive features which tourists delight to see. Gardens have been made, both public and private, that are capable of wonderful development. . The great thing now is to keep the good work going and extend it in such a way as to make the city more and more outstanding as a city of gardens.

Another way of keeping the city beautiful is to see that all buildings which are neglected and not used are pulled down. Nothing looks so bad in a city as old neglected buildings which indicate deterioration.

We take this opprtunity of drawing attention to this subject as near as possible to the beginning of the year, so that people may have it in mind in any plans they may be making. While we do not take much stock in new resolutions may we suggest to all the people of the city that they each do a little toward making Prince Rupert attractive to visitors and enjoyable to those who live here.

Some people have suggested that rows of trees be planted in the boulevards similar to those seen in the south. With this we do not agree. There is no reason why Prince Rupert should be like other cities. She has a type of beauty all her own. Anything that would put either the houses or the streets in the shade would not be beneficial. We want all the sunshine that comes our way and trees in the boulevards would keep some of it away. If anything is planted it should be in the nature of low shrubs, possibly flowering shrubs.

AUSTRALIAN PROSPERITY

Australia has experimented with labor governments and labor legislation and just now that country has a moderate government and labor laws that provide for arbitration of all disputes. There is a high standard of living, no strikes such as are seen today in the United States and the whole country is prosperous.

SPORT CHAT

While Toronto Maple Leafs held the leadership as a result of a six to three victory over the Montreal Canadiens in the Maple Leaf Gardens Saturday night, New York Americans drew up into a tie with the Canadiens in the International Division of the National Hockey League by a double week-end victory over the Montreal Maroons at Montreal Saturday night by a score of 3 to 1 and in New York Sunday night two to one. The Canadiens won over Chicago Black Hawks 4 to 2 at Chicago Sunday night.

As a result of a two to one victory over the Buckaroos in Portland Thursday night, Vancouver Lions assumed exclusive possession of first place in the Pacific Coast Hockey League, having been previously tied with the Seattle Sea Hawks for the leadership. Week-end play brought no further changes in the standings but last night Seattle won two to nothing over the Lions at Vancouver to again take over the lead.

DOWN THE SLOPE IN HAWK-LIKE FORM

The wintry blasts of winter are sweeping over Canada and king winter is dusting the skiing slopes of the sport centres with what it takes to provide ideal conditions for skiers. This odd-angle snap shows an early bird scooting down a slope at Badger, Calif., where the snow often reaches a depth of 10 feet.

STORY OF WM. BOOTH RECALLED

house, caught sight of the galloping animals. Simultaneously, with but one idea, they both rushed into the middle of the street. Booth, who got there first, checked the horses for an instant, only to be thrown violently to the pavement but not until he had seized the trailing reins in hands strengthened by desperation. Nor did he release his hold even when drawn under the flailing steel-shod feet beating at his body. With the grip of death, straining every atom of his strength, he accomplished the seemingly impossible task of halting the maddened team but not until the front wheels of the heavily laden truck had rolled across his chest, breaking his ribs and crushing his iron heart. A dozen men, taking advantage of the temporary retarding due to Booth's sacrifice, got the animals under control, lifted the two terrified hysterical children from their predicament, and picked up the now unconscious form of Bill Booth—his hands still clutching the reins that had dragged him to death.

Briefly this is the story of one man's heroic action, duplicated in one form and another, somewhere every day of the year. The instinct to face danger for others is inherent. Courage in a crisis is commoner than courage under reflection. Brave men do the right thing automatically. There is no logic in heroism. In one tumultuous second of life, men leap into the arms of immortality, if needs be by the grim route and solely for the reason that no other course is open to their decision.

Honored In Death

In the case of the Prince Rupert workman, high commendation, tears of regret, encomiums from all classes fell to his lot. In an hour he became the most talked about man among the seven thousand inhabitants of the city. The procession of mourners that followed the clay of him to the cemetery on the hill was made up not only of his friends out of hundreds of strangers who, the day before his death, had never heard of him. The headstone that marks his grave records the last resting place of William Booth of Derbyshire, England, the date of his birth, the date of his death.

But to this man there is another monument in Prince Rupert that stands where all may see and cherish as something worthy of the city, a memorial that every man, woman and child in its limits endorses with a whole heart—the Prince Rupert Booth Memorial School.

It was not the will of the people that a name so frequently as his upon the public tongue should be forgotten in the generations to come. It seemed almost as though fate had chosen him as the instrument to dispose of a local issue arising from a discussion as to whose name the new school should bear; no small problem in a community so richly endowed with distinguished citizens connected with its history. The controversy was settled as though by magic when James Brady, principal, in a letter addressed to the editor of a local newspaper suggested that the solution lay in naming it the Booth Memorial School. From his epistle, I quote this pregnant phrase:

". . . not wealth, social distinction or high lineage that merits reward, but . . ."

And so, forever written in the memory of Prince Rupert, is the honored name of one worthy to wear the wreath.
