ONE YEAR IN PRISON

Such evidence must either be viva voce or by affidavit.

T. W. Brown, crown counsel, regretted that he could not concur with the application for suspended sentence although he would add that all the evidence crown had against Anderson had been presented at the trial. The crown also accepted the evidence of Dr. Mandy and urged that the utmost effect be given to the recommendation of mercy short of suspended sentence.

Mr. Justice Fisher stated that the case had given him considerable anxiety. It was quite clear by the law, however, that it was necessary that there should be concurrence of crown counsel if there was to be a suspended sentence. There was not this concurrence so it was his duty to impose sentence. Taking everything into consideration, including the provocation and that no weapons had been used, His Lordship sentenced Anderson to one year's imprisonment at Oakalla with hard labor to commence from the date of arrest which was April 9 of this year.
