NEW HAZELTON

George D. Parent, for the last quarter of a century agent for the Canadian National Railways at New Hazelton, will soon be retiring from the railway service on superannuation. He plans to retire to his farm at New Hazelton which for years he has been developing.

The Canadian National Railways is putting in a steel bridge at John Brown Creek near Moricetown station in the lower Bulkley Valley. The new bridge, construction of which has been contemplated for years, is expected to save a fairly large annual expenditure on repairs at this point.

Mrs. Robert Gill and family are visiting at New Hazelton with Mrs. Gill's Spooner before leaving for Prince Rupert where they will make their future residence.

Mrs. Bree has returned to her home at Telkwa after having been a patient in the Hazelton Hospital.

William Strossman and Sam Bouden have arrived at Queen Charlotte from the A. P. Allison Logging Co.'s camp at Cumshewa Inlet. Mr. Bouden will later be coming on to Prince Rupert. Early in the New Year it is expected the Allison camp will resume operations on a large scale. The company's logging railroad now runs into Skidegate on Moresby Island.

MAKE USE OF SCRAPS

Red Cross Women Make Wonders With "Odd Bits" To Fill Christmas Boxes

By Muriel Adams
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO, Dec. 18: (CP) — Mention "scraps" to one of the 200 women who spend an afternoon or morning at the general workroom of the Red Cross Society and she's "off to the races" with a new idea to add to the thousands of garments, shoes, quilts and toys made from odds and ends which fill the Christmas boxes for outpost hospitals of the society.

Scraps from family rag bags are converted into patchwork quilts, manufacturers' samples of last year's latest men's suitings are made into small boys' shorts, woolen samples are bound to make sleeveless children's pull-overs, bits of felt and a sole are turned into bedroom slippers with odd lengths of yarns worked in embroidered designs to brighten them. Latest brain wave of one of the workers is to use cuttings from blue and white flannelette of soldiers' pneumonia jackets to make soft, washable rabbits, ducks and other toys for children.

There are "raggedy anns" made from gingham bits to stick in the parcels. Discarded Christmas cards have been folded to make needle cases and pictures from old magazines are pasted in empty sample books for scrapbooks to amuse the hospital patients.

Converted Stable

Last year more than 6,500 objects were sent to the 500 families and hospital patients—3,500 persons in all—in the districts around the 32 outpost hospitals in northern Ontario. As well as the colorful gifts and clothing, hundreds of bandage rolls, abdominal dressings and gauze sponges were cut, turned and finished by the women workers, sterilized and covered in plain cotton for hospital use.

The workers take pride in their sewing room which was formerly the stable at the back of the Red Cross headquarters. They have painted the walls green, hung yellow curtains and painted window boxes yellow to match. Each afternoon they adjourn to "the loft" [illegible] with chintz-covered furnishings, and have a cup of tea.

It takes 10 days' packing to get the boxes ready to go north. In addition to the clothing, Christmas puddings, candies and "extras" sent in by interested persons, are packed in with the parcels.
