A COLUMBIA CELLULOSE COMPANY, LIMITED crane, under the operation of Henry Vanderheide and Jack Rochon, lifts a log free of the bridge that links Watson Island and the mainland. It was feared the log might go out on the tide and jam under the Company's water main where it could cause considerable damage. However the log was too large for the crane to lift out and had to be dragged up and onto the side of the road. Mr. Vanderheide is inside the cab of the crane and Jack Rochon stands on the road beside it.
