Dick Woods Passes Away in Hazelton Hospital, Buried at Home Village

SKEENA CROSSING, April 12.—The death of Dick Woods, fifteen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Woods of Kitsegukla, occurred in the Hazelton Hospital Sunday morning at 8 o'clock. The death was not only mourned by his family and relatives, but by the whole community.

Funeral services were held Wednesday in the United Church at Kitsegukla. The hymns "Rock of Ages" and "Near My God to Thee" were sung. Members of the Sunday School and Band of Hope, in which Dick Woods was a member, rendered the hymns "Thy Will Be Done." A comforting sermon, entitled "The Destiny of Life," was given by N. McEwen while Chief Morgan led the congregation in prayer. M. Wesley was at the organ.

The Band, under the direction of Walter Wesley, headed the procession from the church to the grave side and rendered music appropriate to the occasion. The pallbearers were: Bert Russell, Arthur Howard, Jeoffry Johnson, Tommy Brown and Joe Brown.

Dick Woods is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Woods, brothers, Ivan, Max and Walter Woods, and sisters Lulu and Pansy Woods, all of Kitsekukla.

LEOPARDS MAKE TROUBLE

ELGIN, South Africa, April 12: (CP)—After killing 60 sheep, a leopard was trapped on Montieth Farm here, the second to be captured in six months.

United Church Sale Is Success

Delightful Affair Yesterday Afternoon Draws Out Good Crowd

In spite of the inclement weather, a very successful spring sale was held yesterday afternoon in the First United Church Hall. The hall was tastefully decorated with spring greenery and tea tables with daffodils. Receiving the guests at the door were Mrs. J. C. Jackson and Mrs. Andrew Thompson.

Mrs. George Ciccone was convenor for the tea room, assisted by Mrs. E. J. Clapp and Mrs. D. Santerbane. Pouring were Mrs. H. T. Locke, Mrs. T. C. Wilding, Mrs. F. M. Davis and Mrs. F. A. Rogers while the serviteurs were Mrs. J. Clavring, Mrs. N. Thomas, Mrs. G. T. German and Mrs. T. Fraser. Mrs. Webber acted as cashier.

The candy sale was conducted by the C. G. I. T. under the direction of Mrs. C. Boardman and Mrs. Gibson and the Young Women's Auxiliary fish pond, novelties and plant booths were in charge of Mrs. Pilkington, Mrs. Jack Wrathall, Mrs. Clarke McLean, Mrs. D. D. McIndoe, Mrs. E. G. Southby and Miss Violet Dell.

The fancy work table was in charge of Mrs. J. S. Irvine and Mrs. G. V. Wilkinson, the home cooking, Mrs. J. Krikevsky and Mrs. E.P. Jenner and the post-office, Miss D. Sharpe and Miss Dorothy Stiles.

ALL READY: DON'T TALK

R. A. F.'s "Boots-and-Saddles" is Quiet Affair But All Done With Precision and Efficiency

WITH THE R.A.F. SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, April 12: (CP)—What happens at a Royal Air Force station when a long-distance reconnaissance flight over enemy territory is ordered? Here's a picture of what it's like.

The warning is issued early in the day. In the afternoon and early evening flying crews have an opportunity to get some sleep.

In the mess the officers chosen for the flight gather at one end of the long ante-room. Two play shove-ha'penny. Another group stands by the fire talking. A young pilot officer writes letters. No one discusses the flight. There are similar scenes in the sergeants' mess and the airmen's institute.

A senior officer is called to the phone, asked by the squadron adjutant to bring the flying crews over.

The "show" is on. The word is passed around. The officers cross to the hangars. Outside it is brighter and weather reports favorable.

The men hurry from their quarters to join the officers. In the squadron commanding officers' room, built into the side of a hangar, the captains of aircraft hold a short last-minute conference before changing into flying kit.

Know Their Jobs

The plan of the operation laid down beforehand is clear-cut. Each man knows exactly what he is to do. The silence is shattered as the motors start. A military sentry with fixed bayonet is on guard. Members of the crew come out to the aircraft. The station commander makes a tour of inspection and the ground crews go about their work. Every machine has its load of ammunition.

Hampered by their heavy clothing and parachutes, the airmen climb into their machines. Only navigation lights are left showing.

The flare-path lights are turned on to guide the pilots in the take-off. The leader of the first section of three aircraft taxis to the edge of the airdrome. With a heavy load of bombs he wants all the run he can get. Ground watchers follow the navigation lights as the machine roars across the field. Then the bomber rises slowly and circles the airdrome.

Soon two other aircraft join it and the other three bombers forming the second section follow immediately. All six are quickly heading for Heligoland Bight.

SLIPS IN THE SKY

CAPE TOWN, April 12: (CP)—When caretaker T. McKinley built a 17-foot cabin launch on the roof of an office building in the business section here, he created a problem for movers who took it to the sea. They lowered it during a quiet Sunday afternoon.

TROUSER MORTALITY

FLEETWOOD, Eng., April 12: (CP)—When a Danish seaman was fished from the sea with a boat-hook here after falling from the dock, his colthing tore and he dropped back and was drowned.

Zoomed Ahead Over Germany

Laconic Report Of R. A. F. Observers Tells Fate Of Nazi Heinkel

LONDON, April 12: (CP)—The crew of a Royal Air Force plane on reconnaissance over Germany gave the occupants of a Heinkel a rude shock.

The British aircraft was on observation and photography duty when its crew saw the Heinkel preparing to land on a German airdrome. The Heinkel was circling around, its undercarriage already down.

The wing commander in charge of the British plane dived under full power out of a cloud bank and flew beneath the enemy bomber, passing directly under the landing wheels. Then he zoomed up in front of the German enabling the rear gunner to fire a burst with his machine-gun.

"There was no retaliation from the German side," was the laconic comment of the narrator of the exploit.

The British plane then continued with its task.
