MR. JUSTICE MANSON SEES DEMOCRACY IN DANGER

powering someone other than itself to legislate with scarcely a murmur heard in the land or even in Parliament. At the same time, authority and functions of the courts were also delegated in some instances to individuals or boards.

Much toil and not a little blood had been spent in bringing slowly into being a polity wherein the people made their laws and independent judges administered them. Parliament had repeatedly in the last fifteen years derogated the supremacy of Parliament and undermined the rule of law by conferring judicial powers upon persons or bodies other than the courts, this having the effect of closing ordinary courts to the individuals. His Lordship cited instances of where this had been done, mentioning such legislation as the Special Powers Act, "blank check" measures and marketing acts. Elected representatives of the people had delegated the duties they were elected to perform. They had passed over the right to legislate, delegation that surely the Fathers of Confederation had never contemplated.

Mr. Justice Manson then went on to discuss the essentials of proper administration of justice—hearing of evidence, cross - examination, public instead of secret hearings, the right of appeal. Failure to preserve these essentials led to the bureaucratic despot which, as a result of the system of giving uncontrolled and arbitrary power to public officials, already existed.

"When Parliament passes such legislation," declared the judge "one may wonder how many members outside the ministry know what they are really doing. How much less do the people know what is being done in this respect by their representatives? All great constitutional lawyers have recognized that it is the rule or supremacy of the law, administered by independent judges, that is the basis of all our constitutional liberties and it is this characteristic of the British constitution which, above all, makes that constitution admired throughout the civilized world. Arbitrary power is certain in the long run to become despotism and there is danger, if a method of administrative law, which is essentially lawlessness is greatly extended, that hardly-won liberties which have taken centuries to establish may be lost. Even in time of war we should not invade the safeguards of our constitutions until after due consideration and under dire necessity.

Tradition on Principle

"Democracy is a tradition—a tradition founded upon a principle—the principle of individual liberty," asserted the speaker in conclusion. "The courts have been the strong right arm of democracy and we know it. Can we afford to let expediency prevail instead of principle? Can we afford to continue to permit our courts to be undermined? Can we afford to permit Parliament to shirk the performance of its functions?"

The luncheon was presided over by G. A. Hunter, the president, who expressed appreciation to the speaker for his address. Guests, besides the judge, were W. O. Fulton, Gordon Fraser, W. D. Vance, R. A. Creech, D. C. McRae and G. S. Barker of Vancouver.

Next Wednesday the Gyro Club will have its regular monthly business luncheon and the week after Hon. W. J. Asselstine, minister of mines and member of the Legislature, on his way to Stewart, will be the speaker.

MELODRAMA FEATURED

David Niven and Olivia de Haviland Are Starred In Mystery Picture "Raffles"

With David Niven playing the part of the sauve and dapper gentleman crook who, although a society favorite and champion on the cricket field, cannot resist the lure of living the life of an adventurer in crime, the exciting mystery-melodrama "Raffles" is the feature offering on the screen of the Capitol Theatre here tonight and tomorrow. When he falls in love and becomes engaged to Olivia de Haviland, playing the part of the lovely sister of his school chum, Raffles decides to give up his secret life of crime. Unexpected events, however, intervene and he is forced to focus his attention on the famous emerald necklace of an eccentric dowager, Dame May Whitty, who invites him to her country estate for a week-end. After many exciting episodes, there is a satisfactory ending to the story.

Other prominent members of the cast include Dudley Digges, E. E. Clive, Peter Godfrey, Douglas Walton, Keith Hitchcock and Lionel Pape.

Much of the action takes place during the week-end on a beautiful country estate in England.
