MILITARY HOSPITAL

May Be Erected In Connection With Prince Rupert General Hospital

That negotiations are under way whereby the Department of National Defence may build a military hospital on the site of the old hospital on Fifth Avenue at Green Street under an agreement by which it might become a unit of the Prince Rupert General Hospital after the war was disclosed last night at the regular monthly meeting of the board of directors of the Prince Rupert General Hospital. Plans have been prepared by the provincial architect's department and have been submitted to the federal department. The matter was taken up during the past week with Major-General Schmedlin, Quartermaster General for Canada, while on a visit to Prince Rupert.

According to present ideas, the military wing would be of construction and design to the existing hospital. The old hospital would have to be demolished to make way for the new structure.

The whole project is still in the formative stage.

Union steamer Cardena is due in port at 10:15 tonight from the south and will sail about midnight on her return to Vancouver and waypoints.

Adam Bell of the Department of Labor at Victoria advised that wage clauses under war contracts should be posted at the local dry dock.

The matter of traffic congestion on Sixth Avenue in the vicinity of the military barracks was brought up and it was decided to approach the civic authorities with a view to either having the street widened or a sidewalk put in for pedestrians.

Approval was expressed of the recently announced personnel of the local rental tribunal consisting of Judge W. E. Fisher, G. P. Tinker and Thomas Elliott.

There was a good attendance of delegates at last night's meeting with President Elliott in the chair.
