Commemorate Macdonald—

CANADA HONORS MEMORY

National Ceremonies at Kingston Tomorrow Recall First Prime Minister

OTTAWA, June 6: (CP)—National commemoration ceremonies tomorrow at Kingston in connection with the 50th anniversary of the death (June 6, 1891) of Sir John Alexander Macdonald, first Prime Minister of the Dominion of Canada, recall that when Sir John died the people he had loved and who as one biographer put it "returned love for love" gave a demonstration of grief "the like of which had never come to Canada since Confederation." Canadians from coast to coast joined in lamenting the loss of a human, kindly and farseeing statesman. Prime Minister William Lyon Mackenzie King and Opposition Leader R. B. Hanson will lead in the national tribute tomorrow.

Sir Hector Langevin to whose lot as senior member of the government it fell to announce to Parliament the death of his leader, broke down completely. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who spoke after Sir Hector as leader of the opposition, said "I fully realize the emotion which chokes the honorable gentleman. His silence under the circumstances is far more eloquent than any human language can be." Later in his speech Sir Wilfrid said Macdonald "was endowed with those inner, subtle, undefinable graces of soul which win and keep the hearts of men."

Of the memorial service later at Westminster Abbey, the London Times said: "Many a great Englishman sleeps within the abbey and many a requiem sung within its walls has awakened mournful echoes in the hearts of English-speaking peoples beyond the seas. But this is the first time that a great sorrow, primarily falling upon our fellow-subjects abroad, has awakened in the mother country a sentiment so strong as to demand and receive expression in the ancient church that is consecrated by so many of our proudest associations."

The salient years of Sir John A. Macdonald were as follows:

1815—Born in George St., Glasgow, Scotland (January 11).

1820—Immigrated with his parents to Canada, settling at Kingston.

1836—Called to the Bar of Upper Canada.

1837—Volunteered to help suppress the Mackenzie-Papineau rebellion.

1838—As counsel defended successfully an American Pole named Schoultz who led an "invasion" of Canada during the 1837 rebellion.

1842—Paid a visit to England to regain his health.

1843—Married his cousin Isabella Clark of Inverness, Scotland. She died in 1858.

1844—Elected as Conservative for Kingston to House of Assembly of Upper and Lower Canada.

1847—Appointed to the cabinet as Receiver-General.

1848—Resigned with government on defeat at the polls but personally "proved the moving spirit of the Conservatives."

1854—Became Attorney-General of Upper Canada when party returned to office.

1857—Made Prime Minister of Upper and Lower Canada and was approved at general election.

1862—Macdonald government defeated together with its Militia Bill, the latter on account of "potential expense."

1864—Conservatives returned to power and Macdonald re-named Attorney-General of Upper Canada.

1867—Confederation of the Canadian provinces. Macdonald leading the "Fathers," becoming first Prime Minister of the Dominion after the general election and being created Knight of the Bath. The same year he married Susan Agnes Bernard of Jamaica. (After Sir John's death in 1891 Lady Macdonald was raised to the peerage of the United Kingdom as Baroness Macdonald of Earnscliffe.

1870-71—Sir John a delegate to Washington for the settlement of the Alabama claims and other differences between Britain and the United States.

1873—Conservative government defeated on the "pacific Scandal" allegations.

1878—Macdonald again prime minister after the Conservatives had been returned on a tariff protection platform.

1884—Proceeded to England for the Imperial Federation League Conference, being recognized as a pioneer "of the principle of Imperial unity."

1891—Sir John returned to power in his last general election (March 5).

1891—Sir John died (June 6).

1892—White marble bust of Sir John unveiled in St. Paul's Cathedral, London.

1941— National Commemoration ceremonies at Kingston, Ontario. (June 7).

Man in the Moon

I'm feeling pretty sore today. I was not invited to march in the parade.

At any rate the parade got out a good crowd and reminded them that this is a good time to buy a few bonds.

It was worth the price to see Jimmy Kelly play the durm.

According to Dame Rumor the bears on Queen Charlotte Islands are so clever they wash the gold out of the black sands on the beach.

"I never could think why they always call a boat a she."

"Then you've never tried to steer one, that's a sure thing."

"What's that got to do with it?"

"It's hard to keep her straight."

"Haven't you noticed that?" said a mistress to her new parlormaid, pointing to a cobweb.

"Oh, yes, ma'am," replied the girl. "Something to do with the wireless, isn't it."

"There are an awful lot of girls who don't want to go married."

"How do you know?"

"I've asked them."

"It seems to me that your wife has been wearing a strange expression lately," said Smith.

"Yes," replied Jones. "She's trying to look like her latest photograph."

Chicken-Pox Saves Lives

Evacuee Had it and Saved Companions from City of Benares Sinking

LONDON, June 6: (CP)—A little girl with chicken-pox saved the lives of 49 children.

She was aboard the torpedoed evacuee liner Volendam last September, enroute to Canada. She and 319 other children were rescued and brought back safely to the United Kingdom.

Parents of 270 children asked that the Children's Overseas Reception Board should send them home because they didn't want to risk sending them off to Canada a second time. But 50 children, at their parents' request were taken to another port to catch the next liner. It was the City of Benares, subsequently torpedoed with considerable loss of life among the child "seavacuees."

Before the Benares sailed the little girl caught chicken-pox. A doctor said all 10 children must go into quarantine and could not sail. So they were saved.

Ace Woman Pilot To Marry Major

Mona Friedlander, pioneer Transport Flier. Is Announced Engaged

LONDON, June 6: (CP)— Miss Mona Friedlander, one of the first women to enter the Air Transport Auxiliary, the service which delivers airplanes from factories to airfields, has become engaged to Major Alan Forward, M. C., R. A. S. C.

Daughter of a millionaire banker, 26-year old Miss Friedlander is an ace woman pilot. For months she flew day and night as a "target" for anti-aircraft tests. She was the only woman in 1939 to pass the examination for civil air navigators' licences (second class). As a civil pilot she had carried hundreds of passengers.
