The Experts Say - -

CAKES AND PIES—The butter ration may be slim, and the grocer may say "no" when begged for shortening, but nevertheless careful housewives still are turning out successful pies and cakes. They're using every kind of fat they can get their hands on as replacement for butter and shortening quantities in recipes.

Cooking experts say clarified pork fat or lard makes excellent pastry or cakes.

The flavor of fat from smoked pork blends well with meat and therefore can be used to advantage for pastry for meat pies or sausage rolls. It can also be used in any recipe for spice cookies or gingerbread which contains spice or molasses.

Any clarified fat or dripping may be substituted for shortening, measures in all cooking except baking where large amounts of fat are used and a definite texture is desired.

Chicken fat with its bland flavor and soft texture can be used immediately upon being rendered for all types of cooking.

Beef dripping is too hard to use satisfactorily in cooking, but two cups rendered beef fat melted with one cup pork fat or lard and stirred occasionally while cooling to prevent separation gives a soft pliable fat.

Lamb fat is hard with a distinctive flavor. While not satisfactory for use in baked products, it goes well in the preparation of meat dishes. However, if after clarified lamb fat is mixed with a soft fat in the proportion of one part lamb to seven parts soft fat it can be used in baking.

Veal fat is soft and mild flavored, and when rendered is excellent for cooking. Different fats vary in shortening power. To substitute for shortening use: 7-8 cup clarified pork fat or lard; ¾ cup chicken fat; 1 cup beef dripping.

A CHEAP CAKE—A cheap cake that's easy to make and guaranteed not to flop in the centre has been the dream of housewives since time immemorial. Here is a one-egg cake which we believe really fills the bill.

Quantities: ½ cup butter (or equivalent), 1 cup granulated sugar, 1 egg, ¾ cup milk, 1½ cups flour (when sifted), 2 level teaspoons baking powder, pinch of salt.

Cream butter with a fork, then add sugar, add beaten egg. Sift flour, making powder and salt, and add to batter alternately with the milk. Bake 35 minutes in a square tin in moderate oven.

Varied flavorings may be used as desired. For orange cake add the grated rind of an orange to mixture and make an icing from icing sugar, 1 tablespoon butter and the juice of the orange. A boiled icing which also goes well is made from 1 cup brown sugar boiled in 3 tablespoons water until it hairs. This is added to the stiffly beaten white of egg and is beaten with it. In this case to eliminate waste the yolk of the egg should be used in the cake.

ceeds, which last year amounted to more than $500, was the desire of some of the 50 members present to raise a fund to finance the 1947 provincial convention of the Junior Chamber of Commerce of Canada which may be held here next June.

Preceding it was a debate on the advisability or the local Junior Chamber cancelling its contributions to the Civic Centre and Pioneers' home in favor of building up the convention fund.

The move was defeated by a vote, as were amendments which would have tabled discussion on the matter until next January when it will be known whether or not the provincial convention will be held in Prince Rupert.

In appealing for thoughtful consideration prior to the vote, President Lloyd Morris said that it was a "serious question because, if we drop our Civic Centre contribution, other organizations will follow."

The motion, as presented by Stuart Furk, urged that since the Junior Chamber "is not a service organization, it should not contribute to the Civic Centre as a service organization." However, he appealed to individual members to support the community endeavour.

Reminders of the "community service" responsibilities of the Junior Chamber were made by Rev. A. F. MacSween and by past president Clifford Ham, who is also a member of both the Civic Centre and the Pioneers' Home executives.

Secretary Gordon Durkin urged that, since the organization had only about $7 in the treasury, the members should start raising money before they decided how to spend it.

Motion that the proceeds from the radio auction should be divided equally between the Civic Centre, Pioneers' Home and Salvation Army was approved by the membership without dissent.
