Police halt Scotsman

EDINBURGH, Scotland (A)-Police have stopped Norman Aitken from running a raffle with himself as first prize. He was ready to be the winner's "slave" for a year.

Aitken, 28, an unemployed restaurant manager, was planning to get 5,000 tickets printed when the police stepped in. "You can't do it," they told him. "It would be an illegal lottery." Said the dejected Aitken

"The draw was to have been held in an Edinburgh ballroom. Whoever won the raffle would have had my services free for a year."

Aitken figured that by selling 5,000 tickets at 10 shillings ($1.40) each he would have a good income for that year's

"I would have tackled anything, provided it was not degrading, indecent or illegal," he said.
