LYNN PATRICK, general manager of the Boston Bruins, and former NHL star and coach Milt Schmidt, recall one of the truly "great moments in Canadian sport," as Lynn holds a painting of his father Lester Patrick, depicting that memorable night in Montreal when the "Silver Fox" donned pads and played goal — he'd never played goal before — to inspire his Ranger team to a 2-1 Stanley Cup playoff win. The night: April 6, 1928. The painting, by Canadian artist Gerry Sevier, is the third in a series of eight being produced under the patronage of an insurance company.
