Looking Back in SPORT - Reminiscences and Records

Hoop History

Origins of many sports are shrouded in the clouds of medieval and ancient history. In this respect basketball is unique.

For basketball is an out and out American invention—conceived by an American and played first in the United States.

Dr. James A. Naismith invented basketball in Springfield, Massachussettsr, late in 1891—with the first game being played on January 20, 1892. A peach basket served as the first basket goal.

Dr. Naismith drew up 13 original rules. As late as 1937, 12 of these rules were in effect. Since that time, some of the rules have been modified to speed the game up, but in substance and spirit, the orgiinal rules are still the game's guiding light—certainly a tribute to Dr. Naismith's foresight and genius.

Basketball was first played with 7 men on a side. At one time or another, there were 9 men and 8 men. The game also has been shortened from the time when it consisted of three periods of 20 minutes each.

Expert free throwers were once carried on a team to do nothing but throw free throws after fouls. This was then permitted under the rules. About the same time, three fouls counted as a point for the other side.

Girls started playing basketball about 40 years ago, but not openly because girls who engaged in sports were considered "tomboys." However, the gals could not be stopped and their participation grew until in 1926 the Amateur Athletic Union authorized the first girls' tournament. Now there are over one million girl players.

Until 1930, basketball suffered from obscurity—even sports pages ignored the doings of the basketballers. As is often the case, however, the public dictated the policy and now the smallest high school team receives publicity—and the papers are jammed with news of the college and professional teams during the season.

SPECTATOR SPORT

More people pay to see basketball games every year than any other sport—even more than view baseball and boxing combined!

In Indiana, generally considered as the "hotbed" of basketball, practically every crossroad hamlet of ten people or more has a basketball team. There you find a basketball hoop nailed on the side of almost every farmyard barn. Every grade and high school has its basketball team and the season lasts as long as the school year. Furthermore, the towns support the teams. It's not uncommon to find 3,000 spectators at a basketball game—in a town with a population of 3,500.

The latest available figures show that 90,000,000 pay to watch basketball every year in the United States at a cost of approximately $45,000,000.

Baseball innings originally were called hands ,and runs were called aces. The game ended when either side made 21 aces.

ter. In the final quarter High School played hard and came to within 1 point but then Anderson dropped in a two-pointer to put Merchants 3 up. With 42 seconds left Ratchford banged in a push shot from the key to keep High School in the game. In the final seconds Merchants managed to hold on to the ball and achieve their win.

High School took 58 shots and made 8. They made 8 of 17 free throws. Merchants took 64 shots and made 12. They netted only one of 23 free throws.

JUNIOR

In the Junior game North Star rang up the longest winning streak of the season—10 straight—as they defeated the Kinsmen 28 to 20. The first half was close with Kinsmen coming from behind in the second quarter to tie it up at the half 12 all. Helin was the Kinsmen marksman as he banged in 8 points. In the third quarter North Star sprang out in front as a succession of fouls paid off for them in points at the free throw line. Helin kept his team in the game as he dropped in his final four points to make a total of 12, high man of the game. The score was 22 to 16. In the final quarter play became a little more aggressive and ragged. North Star held onto their lead to give them the win.
