AUSTERITY IS NOT SO BAD

Mrs. E. H. Hicks Returns to City from Visit in England and France

"Yes, there is austerity still but things are not as bad as I expected to find," said Mrs. E. H. Hicks today following her return by Sunday's train from a trip to England and France.

Mrs. Hicks thinks that conditions would be even better if it were not for black marketing, that is, if there was full distribution by rationing alone.

Compared with Canada, of course, the tiny pats of butter and oils which are rationed out weekly certainly seem meagre.

Vegetables and fruits are scarce although there seem to be plenty of the cabbage type of vegetables of which a large quantity are being produced in Britain.

While the clothing ration was about to be lifted, Mrs. Hicks had left England before the removal was effected. She would have brought clothing home otherwise. As it was for gift purposes she found brass articles available.

Mrs. Hicks made a brief trip to Paris to visit a cousin who is attending l'Ecole Britannique there.

She spent most of her time visiting at Bath.

Crossing the Atlantic both going and coming, she travelled on the Aquitania and stopped off at Halifax to visit a daughter.
